OPEC set to boost prices

GENEVA (AP) — Members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) are gathering in this Swiss city for a pricing meeting that is expected to increase their base price of crude oil to at least $18 a barrel.

That would be $1 more than the current average price of OPEC crude.

The oil ministers of the 13 members of the oil cartel meet Tuesday and Wednesday to try to unify their price structure after three months of proliferating surcharges due to the oil shortage.

OPEC's base price since March has been $14.55 for a 42-gallon barrel, but the demand due to the reduction in Iranian production enabled individual members to tack on surcharges running as high as $6 a barrel.

The rush by all the OPEC nations except Saudi Arabia to profit from individual surcharges caused fears among some members that the cartel was losing the unity that enabled it to control world oil prices. As a result, most members seem determined to leave Geneva with a unified price.

"The pricing system should be the same for all the countries," said Oil Minister Humberto Calderon-Berti of Venezuela. "We have to find a point where all of us can come together."

Both Calderon and Kuwait's oil minister, Ali Khalifa Al-Sabah, said they expect the group will have little trouble reaching a consensus.

"I don't think it will be a difficult meeting," said Khalifa.

Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani of Saudi Arabia hinted a base price of $18 a barrel would be acceptable to his government. Since Saudi Arabia is OPEC's biggest producer, most analysts expect agreement on a price at or near that level.

There have been rumors that Iran and some of the other more militant members might hold out for a much higher price, but the Saudis' ability to hold the price down by increasing production was expected to keep the others in line.

Saudi Arabia is currently producing 8.5 million barrels of oil a day, about 30 per cent of OPEC's total, and 15 per cent of the world's production. The head of the Saudi state oil company, Abdul Hadi Taher, said on Sunday that his government might increase production one million barrels a day to ease the impact of the price increase on the industrialized West. But the Saudis could increase production by 3.5 million barrels if they wanted to.

The dirty robbers

LECCO, Italy (AP) — Bandits using skin-diving equipment made their way through a sewer into the underground safe-deposit box room of a bank in this north Italian town and fled with cash and jewels worth millions of dollars, police said today.

Police said the bandits used the sewage system to reach the thick safe room wall which they perforated with pneumatic drills. Then the bandits emptied all the safe-deposit boxes and made off with their contents.

There was no official estimate of the amount taken, but police put the haul in the millions of dollars.

Gas-line violence

Times News Services

It was the driest weekend ever for drivers in the eastern U.S. with the lines long and the mood mean.

Frustrated motorists joined striking truckers to fight police in Levittown, Pa. while Suffolk County, N.Y., police answered more than 100 trouble calls at the gas pumps and Minnesota stations reported that they may rapidly sell off June allocations and close for the rest of the month.

Throughout the New York City metropolitan area the gas dried up. In the city, lines at service stations were still long today with morning rush hour traffic lighter as commuters used mass transit or car pools.

Fires and vandalism marked the protests by about 3,000 persons Sunday evening in the Philadelphia suburb of Levittown. The crowd was dispersed by 300 officers dressed in riot gear with dogs and billy clubs.

More than 100 demonstrators and 12 police officers were injured, none seriously, said Bristol Township police officer Raymond Grimes.

The violence came less than 24 hours after a disturbance involving trucks and disgruntled motorists that resulted in 69 arrests Saturday night.

Bystanders said that firemen trying to extinguish fires in an abandoned car and a van were pelted with beer cans and rocks. Two service stations were vandalized.

Somoza rejects ouster demand

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (WP) — President Anastasio Somoza has categorically rejected a resolution of the Organization of American States calling for his resignation, and ordered his National Guard commanders to find new recruits, maintain unity and continue fighting.

Late Saturday night, on a monitored police band radio hookup with commanding officers battling Sandinista guerrillas throughout the country, Somoza said the OAS resolution "encourages us to continue struggling."

Mass withdrawal of international support for his government "means nothing more than that we will have to fight with only our own resources," Somoza told the commanders.

"It doesn't matter to me what some countries say who don't know the reality of Nicaragua," he said.

A 17-nation OAS majority voted Saturday for the "immediate and definite replacement of the Somoza regime," and the installation of an opposition government.

In a separate 10-minute televised speech to the nation Sunday afternoon, Somoza did not even mention the subject of resignation. The OAS resolution, he said, "is a clear intent to violate the sovereignty of the Nicaraguan people" but is "not obligatory for member countries."

"It only urges members bilaterally to look for peaceful solutions to the Nicaraguan problem," Somoza said. "As a man open to dialogue . . . I want to say to all doned off behind barricades

Atkey drafts job program: Grits scoff

OTTAWA (CP) — Employment Minister Ron Atkey says he hopes to announce a new job-creation policy this week that will entice the private sector to make work for thousands of unemployed Canadians, especially youth.

However, while Atkey is preparing bold statements about "new directions in job creation," officials are doubting the Progressive Conservative government's ability to deliver job creation promises made during the election campaign.

Officials suggest that the new policy will virtually be the former Liberal government's policy with some tinkering, such as renaming existing programs. They say there is no money for dramatic changes.

And some MPs say privately that Atkey wouldn't dare abolish direct job creation programs such as Canada Works — as promised by Prime Minister Clark during the campaign — because some politicians count on the grants to stay in the good graces of many constituents.

Canada Works grants are allocated on a constituency basis with MPs having a say in who gets how much money for what projects.

"That's a matter very much under review," Atkey said in an interview, suggesting that a decision on abolishing the $194 million Canada Works and related multi-million dollar grant programs may be postponed.

Officials say that another program Clark promised to abolish, called FLIP (Fed-

Arabs applaud embassy study

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Clark's move to defuse the explosive Jerusalem issue over the weekend has apparently reassured Arab representatives here.

But Israeli Ambassador Mordechai Shalev said after meeting Clark he wanted to discuss details of the prime minister's plan with his own government before reacting. However, he applauded Clark for standing by his decision to move the Canadian embassy in Israel to Jerusalem from Tel Aviv — though the move now seems a long way off.

Egyptian Ambassador Hassan Fahmy said Sunday he was "greatly relieved" when Clark told him Saturday he was appointing former Conservative leader Robert Stanfield to carry out a thorough fact-finding study in the Middle East.

Fahmy also noted with approval Clark's statement that the Jerusalem move must be "compatible with the efforts that are being made to achieve a comprehensive peace settlement in the Middle East."

"That's a very important point actually," the ambassador said. The Arabs have repeatedly said shifting the embassy to Jerusalem would undermine peace efforts.

Clark indicated the Stanfield mission will not be completed until next year. If Canada waits to move the embassy until Middle East peace is achieved, the transfer to Jerusalem may be years away.

Police drive truck into bikers' club

TORONTO (UPC) — Toronto police used a truck to smash through the door of a motorcycle clubhouse Saturday, charging a man in the shooting of a woman at another club's headquarters earlier.

Police said members of the Para-Dice Riders and Iron Hawgs motorcycle clubs had fought each other in a tavern brawl Friday night, leading to an incident at the Iron Hawgs clubhouse in which a woman was shot in the buttocks and stomach with a shotgun.

Police said Para-Dice members, armed with shotguns and rifles, forced members of the Iron Hawgs to kneel on the floor and strip the club crests off their jackets — a sign of submission.

One Iron Hawg member refused and was hit across the head with a shotgun butt, police said. The gun went off, hitting the woman.

City and provincial police, armed with a search warrant, were later refused entry to the Para-Dice Riders headquarters and used the armored truck to smash through the steel-reinforced door.

Security tight as Joe hits Tokyo

By JIM ROBB
FP News Service

TOKYO — Prime Minister Joe Clark walked down the gangway of his armed forces Boeing 707 today to be greeted by Japanese Foreign Minister Sunao Sonoda as he arrived for the economic summit of seven nations which opens Thursday.

Clark's flight into Tokyo's Haneda Airport was uneventful, in contrast to the attempted terrorist interference with President Jimmy Carter's aircraft on its approach Saturday.

But although the landing was quiet the strict security the Japanese have mounted for this economic summit was visible even before the Canadian aircraft touched down.

Security policemen were spaced at short intervals along the length of the runway, and in nearby waterways police boats circled slowly with their armed crews.

The roads to the New Otani hotel, being used by the Canadian delegation, was lined with policemen as buses carrying journalists sped by. There were heavy police details at key intersections and in buildings on the route.

Traffic is being turned back from the conference area surrounding the Akasaka Palace in downtown Tokyo while the summit is being held and Japanese television is broadcasting notices to drivers to check with police on what streets to use.

The prime minister had time for only a few brief comments to reporters, cordoned off behind carricades from the official party, before he was whisked away by helicopter to Akasaka Palace to view the conference site, before going on to his hotel.

Clark told reporters it was a significant year in Canadian-Japanese relations because it was 50 years ago that Canada established diplomatic relations with Japan.

He also reminded journalists this is his second visit here this year. He met Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira for the first time in January. Japan was the first stop on Clark's eastern tour when he was opposition leader.

Logistics screw-ups caused by inexperienced staff hampered most of that earlier tour but everything went smoothly today as the professionals in the armed forces and external affairs took over.

Laker Airways hit hard

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Sir Freddie Laker said Sunday night the future of Laker Airways, the cut-rate transatlantic air service, is being jeopardized by the grounding of DC-10 aircraft in the United States.

In an interview with the NBC-TV Prime Time program, Sir Freddie said the temporary ban on DC-10 flights in the United States is costing his airline about $700,000 a day.

Asked how long Laker Airways might withstand the grounding of its DC-10 fleet, Sir Freddie said: "I think we could go on for about 50 days."

Sir Freddie, speaking in the live interview from London, reiterated that he thinks maintenance procedures are to blame for the May 25 crash of an American Airlines DC-10 in Chicago which claimed 273 lives.

And in Washington today, The Post says DC-10 jetliners, unlike other jumbo jets, lack a safety system designed to prevent the kind of control loss that was a factor in the May 25 crash in Chicago.

The newspaper says the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration, which certified the DC-10 as airworthy in 1971, was persuaded by McDonnell Douglas, manufacturer of the plane, that the DC-10 could be controlled without the system.

Fred Farrar, an FAA official in Washington, refused to comment on the report.

The system concerns control surfaces called slats located on the wings of jetliners, The Post said.

Slats are huge metal plates on the front edge of a wing that are extended out and down from the wing during takeoff and landing to give the plane added lift at low speeds.

If the slats on one wing remain extended while those on the opposite wing retract, it can cause an airplane to roll out of control, which is believed to be what happened on the DC-10 that crashed in Chicago.

Bike crash victim's condition 'critical'

A 23-year-old Victoria man remains in critical condition in the intensive care unit of Victoria General Hospital with injuries he suffered when his motorcycle collided head-on with a car on Prospect Lake Road near Munns on Saturday.

Saanich police said Wayne Robinson, 118 Gorge West, received multiple fractures in the mishap which occurred around 7:30 p.m.

Robinson's wife Cathy Dale, 17, who was riding pillion, was also injured but is in good condition in VGH.

Both were wearing helmets.

The driver of the car, Graham Bibby, 27, and his wife Brenda, 23, of 3620 Happy Valley Road, were treated at Royal Jubilee Hospital for cuts and bruises and later released.

Police said Robinson's motorcycle, a 1977 Harley-Davidson, was demolished and about $4,000 damage was done to the Bibby vehicle.

In another accident Saturday, two persons escaped with minor injuries after their sports car crashed into a power pole at Lansdowne and Aldridge and burst into flames.

Driver Robin Walker, 21, of 12-417 Vancouver and passenger Arnie Hassel-Green, 22, of 3220 Beach were taken to Royal Jubilee where they were treated for cuts and bruise and released.

Gold price soars

LONDON (AP) — The price of gold hit record trading highs this morning in London and Zurich. The dollar fell against the major currencies.

The top London bullion dealers fixed the gold price at $284.50 an ounce this morning, up $2.25 on Friday's $282.25 close. Another fix was due this afternoon.

In Zurich, gold was being traded at just below the London price, $284.375 an ounce, up from $283.875 Friday, which was a record European closing high price.

Bullion dealers said buying and selling was moderately heavy as the financial world anxiously awaited a new increase in world oil prices at Tuesday's meeting in Geneva of the oil producing countries, OPEC. Forecasts were that oil will rise to between $18 and $20 a barrel from the current OPEC base price of $14.55.

Another rise will weaken the purchasing power of money almost everywhere.

Gold is always bought at times of monetary uncertainty and the present difficulties coincide with an economic slowdown in the Western world.

Press border ban error

The federal immigration department has apologized for the actions of officers who refused last February to allow Seattle newspaper employees to cross the Pacific Highway border near White Rock.

Roger Stonebanks of Victoria, western Canada regional vice-president of The Newspaper Guild, received the apology from deputy immigration minister J.L. Manion.

About 20 people from the Seattle Times and Seattle Post-Intelligencer were coming Feb. 25 to Vancouver where they planned to join in a picket line at Pacific Press, which produces the Vancouver Sun and Province newspapers.

The plant has been closed by a strike-lockout since Nov. 1.

Immigration officers told the Seattle employees they were in contravention of a section of the Immigration Act which forbids people planning to participate in a labor dispute in Canada from entering the country.

However, Manion said it is not his department's policy to prevent persons who wish to picket or demonstrate peacefully during labor disputes from entering Canada.

"The officer who refused to admit the members of your Seattle local apparently did so because he had misinterpreted a section of the immigration regulations which prohibits the issuance of an employment visa to someone who intends to work at a plant where a labor dispute is in progress," Manion said.

Gen. Haig escapes as bomb blasts auto

CASTEAU, Belgium (AP) — Gen. Alexander Haig, the NATO military commander, escaped unharmed today from a powerful explosion that injured three of his guards and damaged his car as he was driving from his home in Obourg to his office in Casteau, an official source said. A motorcyclist was reported arrested not far from the site.

A spokesman for Haig, due to retire Friday, said the black Mercedes Benz carrying two Belgian policemen and one U.S. security guard landed on its roof and was wrecked by the explosion that apparently was touched off by a land mine detonated by remote control.

The guards, who were not identified, were only slightly injured, however, he said, and have already left the hospital. He said Haig proceeded to his office after the explosion and was working as usual.

Haig's car had its exhaust and trunk damaged but could still operate. Haig's car was in front of the guards' car and police said there appeared to be a second escort car preceding Haig.

Authorities at first reported only two security guards were hurt.

Belgian police, meanwhile, said two men riding motorcycles had been spotted at the site of the explosion, and the Belgian news agency Belga said one of them was arrested in Ath, about 20 kilometres away.

However, NATO officials said they have no idea so far of who was behind the explosion, and no group claimed responsibility immediately.

The incident took place about 8:30 a.m. near the village of Obourg where Haig lives, as he was being driven to his nearby office. Obourg and Casteau are a few kilometres apart.

Casteau, site of Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe, is 50 kilometres south of Brussels, near the expressway to Paris.

Haig, 55, is retiring after 31 years of active military service.

He commanded allied and U.S. forces in Europe for 4½ years.

He has been considered among Republican candidates for the U.S. presidency. When he announced his retirement in January, Haig said he had no political plans yet, but "nothing is excluded."

Haig will pass his supreme allied command to another U.S. general, Bernard Rogers, 57, at a ceremony in Casteau.

Haig was President Nixon's chief of staff and virtually ran the White House at the peak of the Watergate scandal until Nixon resigned on Aug. 9, 1974.

Round-the-world sailor had a 'whale' of a time

Foiled by whales in his attempt to cross the Atlantic in a rubber boat, Paul Parsons says the next time he tries, he'll leave from Newfoundland to avoid them. Speaking Sunday in Lunenburg, N.S. he said he wished someone had told him about the migration route of the whales so an alternative route could have been chosen. "It was bloody awful to see so many of those huge whales around and not be able to get out of their way," he said. "I never felt for a moment they were doing it deliberately . . . there wasn't much I could do about it."

Lucille Ball set for television comeback

A California man Sunday night hit a Las Vegas slot-machine jackpot for $285,000 to break a world record established less than two weeks ago. Brian Flattery, a finance company manager from Mission Hills, Calif., hit the jackpot at the Flamingo Hilton Hotel. The amount won by Flattery surpassed by $5,000 a jackpot won June 10 by Judi Hansen of Santa Ana, Calif., at another Strip hotel. "I went straight up in the air," Flattery said. "I'm not sure I'm down yet." Flattery amassed his winnings in 35 minutes, starting with $20 capital and betting $3 at each pull of the handle. Like Miss Hansen, Flattery played a "progressive" slot machine in which the amount increases the longer the machine is played.

Organ tones long have thundered through New York's Cathedral of St. John the Divine, but Sunday, the church rocked to the beat of Max Roach's drums, Cecil Bridgewater's trumpet, Odean Pope's sax and Calvin Hill's bass. It was all part of this year's Newport Jazz Festival and to mark the occasion, Roach teamed with the J.C. White Singers and the cathedral choir to compose a new Sanctus Benedictus. Exulted Rev. James Morton: "Modern jazz, as performed in the immensity of the world's largest Gothic structure, provides an exciting cultural juxtaposition that has both musical and spiritual appeal." It was good music too.

Comedienne Lucille Ball, for more than 20 years a top star on CBS, has agreed to develop new comedies for NBC, according to that network's president Fred Silverman. Speaking to about 150 television commentators and critics in Los Angeles, Silverman said NBC will help Lucy start a new production company, adding that she will appear in specials for the network as well as working as a network consultant in developing new shows.

And, finally, the quote of the day comes from Los Angeles divorce lawyer Marvin Mitchelson, who's handling both Bianca Jagger's case against rock star husband Mick and Lydia Criss' split from Kiss mainstay Peter Criss: "I have nothing personal against rock stars — just lawsuits."

Reagan top GOP runner

DETROIT (UPI) — Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan is considered the top GOP vote-getter in the 1980 presidential race, and Massachusetts Sen. Edward Kennedy will head the Democrats, according to a Detroit News survey.

The copyright poll in the Sunday edition showed state Republican leaders expected Reagan to far surpass other GOP presidential hopefuls. They saw Kennedy as a much tougher Democratic opponent than President Jimmy Carter, and a majority expect Kennedy to be the nominee.

The newspaper polled 46 of the top Republican officials from the 50 states and the District of Columbia last week. The GOP National Committee is meeting in Minneapolis.

Reagan headed the list of popular GOP vote-getters in every region and in 35 states, including California, Florida, Illinois, Massachusetts, Michigan, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Texas.

For the Democrats, Kennedy was viewed as more popular than Carter in all of the nation's major states except two — California, where Carter was ahead, and Illinois, where Kennedy and California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. were tied.

Ripper taunts police

LONDON (UPI) — "You're not very good, are you George?" the voice sneered at Assistant Chief Constable George Oldfield.

Police hope the voice, on a 60-second tape cassette mailed to Oldfield last week, will lead to the capture of the "Yorkshire Ripper," the most vicious British mass murderer since Jack the Ripper terrorized London nearly a century ago.

The killer has struck 11 times, all the victims were women, nine of them prostitutes.

"There are plenty of them (prostitutes) out there," the voice said. "They are a bad lot, and someone has got to do something."

The killer then promised victim No. 12 will be from the Manchester area.

One regional crime officer called the brief recording, "the most incredible tape I have heard in my entire life. It is not boastful, almost like a personal chat between the Ripper and George Oldfield. It's almost as if he is saying 'Here I am — let's see if you are good enough to catch me.'"

Police officials said dozens of copies of the tape have been sent to other police forces for possible voice identification.

The cassette was postmarked from northeast England and the voice on the tape speaks with a strong northern accent. Senior detectives said Sunday they are convinced the recording is genuine because it contains undisclosed details that only they — and someone involved with the murders — could know.

Energy policy needed

The announcement from Premier Bill Bennett that the B.C. government will bring down a comprehensive energy policy within the next few months is excellent news for all British Columbians.

It has become increasingly clear during the last few months and years that a comprehensive policy is essential to resolve the fundamental energy questions that have been plaguing the government, industries and individual residents. Without such a policy, no one can do more than lurch along, caught in the conflicts between environmental interests and energy expansion, between ever-growing demands for electricity and ever-growing concerns about the safety and suitability of new power developments.

One of the most important advantages of the policy is that it will shift the burden of energy-policy-making away from the corporate monolith, B.C. Hydro, and back to the government where it belongs.

For much too long, Hydro has been able to act as prosecutor, judge and executor regarding energy problems in B.C. It has asked its clients how much energy they would like to have in the future, then judged the demand and the developments necessary to meet it, then gone ahead with massive power projects.

Gordon Roper, Hydro's Vancouver Island manager, made the corporation's view quite clear last week when he told a meeting of Victoria's downtown business advisory committee: "Hydro doesn't have a mandate to change people's lifestyle. Our mandate is to supply power to people who request it."

Since Hydro is essentially accountable to no one for its actions, it is probably not unreasonable for it to have such a narrow role. A Crown corporation notorious for its remoteness from the ordinary citizen should not be making decisions to change people's lifestyles. Neither, however, should it be making the essentially political decisions of energy vs. environment, of hydroelectric development vs. nuclear power. And neither should it be given unfettered freedom to decide that power should be supplied just because somebody requests it.

All those decisions should be made by elected officials, by a government that can be defeated at the polls if the citizens object to the route it has taken.

Hydro's mandate should be to supply power to those requesting it, within detailed guidelines laid down by governments.

Those guidelines should be supplied in the comprehensive energy policy that Bennett and his ministers are planning. They can't come any too soon.

Taking a second look

Prime Minister Joe Clark has discovered one of the first lessons of being in government — when programs do not go as planned, it's time to step back for a second look.

Clark's election promise to move the Canadian embassy in Israel from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem was not a good one in the first place. It took too simplified a view of the whole Middle East conflict and clearly was made without a full understanding of the consequences the move would have.

When the Conservatives won the election and began to try to act on the promise, those consequences became immediately apparent. The Arab Monetary Fund announced it was withdrawing its money from Canadian banks. Arab governments suggested other economic sanctions might be taken against Canada or that diplomatic relations might be broken. There were even veiled hints that Canada might be considered an appropriate target for Palestinian terrorists.

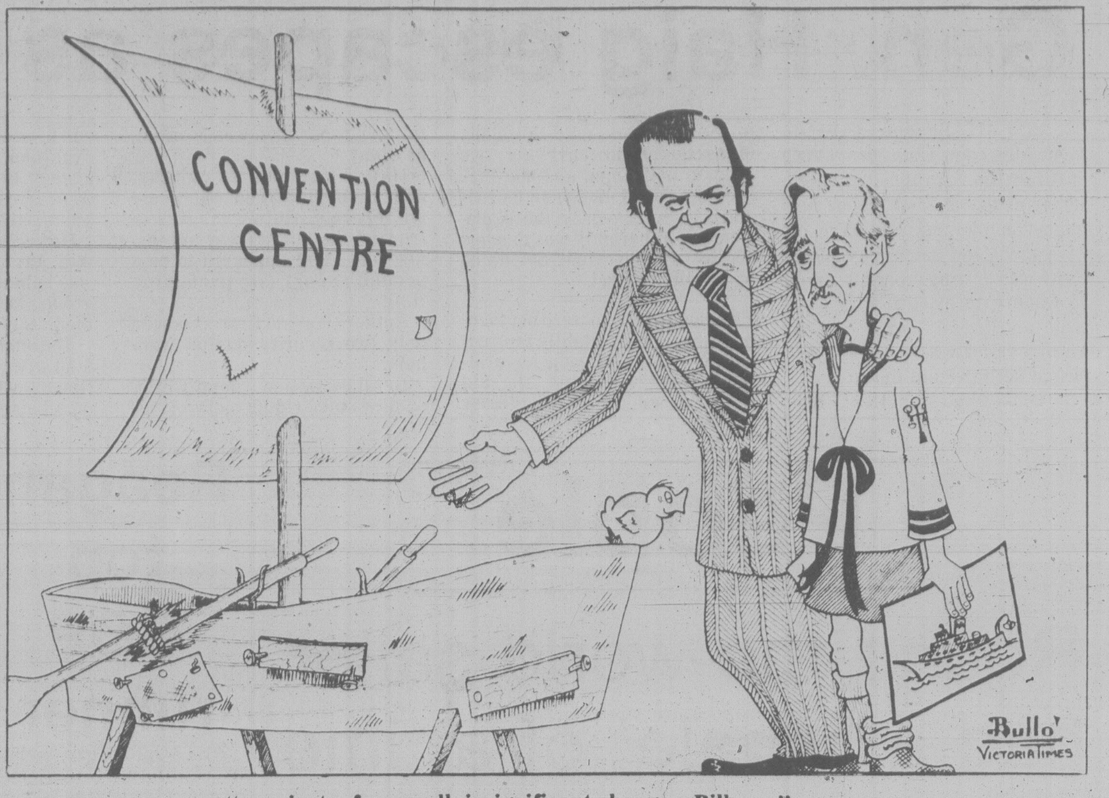
The Canadian position was not at all helped by the comments of Immigration Minister Ron Atkey that Canada should persevere with the move since the Arabs' bark was worse than their bite. Not understanding the English idiom, the Arabs thought Atkey was comparing them to a pack of dogs.

Last week Clark clearly realized that all was not going as it should. On Saturday he met with both Arab and Israeli ambassadors, then announced that the plan had been placed on the back burner. Former Conservative leader Robert Stanfield has been appointed to study the whole question of Canada-Middle East relations and to make recommendations to the government. The study is expected to take at least a year to complete.

This change in position should not be regarded as caving in to Arab blackmail. Rather it should be regarded as a sign of common sense by Clark. He has come to realize that the Middle East situation is much more complicated than he first thought, that any unilateral action by his government could have profound effects on peace efforts as well as on the Canadian economy.

It makes far more sense to study the issue thoroughly than to charge ahead blindly regardless of the consequences.

The ability to take a second look is a valuable one for any government. It should prove especially valuable to the new federal government which, because of its lack of experience, will probably make a few wrong decisions as it learns the ropes.



" . . . just a few small, insignificant changes, Bill . . . "

Manitoba's energy gold

WINNIPEG — When Premier Sterling Lyon recently threw the switch that officially commissioned the 980 megawatt Long Spruce generating station on the Nelson River, about 550 miles north of Winnipeg, he did a lot more than start the huge turbines producing power.

He started a station large enough, through its power exports, to begin chipping away at the huge provincial debt that has been incurred to develop hydroelectric power. He also confirmed one of the most controversial decisions ever made by a former premier, Duff Roblin, more than 15 years ago when his government chose to develop the last of its hydro potential rather than go along with the new darling of the electrical community, nuclear energy.

Was hydro obsolete?

When Roblin decided to put Manitoba on a course of hydroelectric development, oil was cheap and coal was cheaper. Many engineers attempted to convince the premier that it was foolish to spend the huge amounts of money necessary for conventional hydro plants, when everyone knew that atomic energy could be produced more cheaply in plants located close to user cities, rather than in remote areas.

The engineers told Roblin that nuclear power was on the verge of a technological breakthrough that would make all other forms of power generation obsolete before they could be brought on stream.

Roblin continued to face criticism during the early construction work on the Nelson River, particularly when it became necessary for Manitoba to agree to pay for the costs of constructing one of the world's longest direct current transmission line, a 535-mile stretch of cable that linked the major Nelson River plants with Winnipeg and other southern communities that required the power.

Part of the early plans for the Nelson included the sale of export power to the American markets to the south, but these plans, and the transmission lines that were required, were temporarily shelved soon after Roblin's Conservative government was replaced by an NDP administration, headed by Ed Schreyer, in 1969.

The Schreyer government changed the sequence of power development on the Nelson, building the capital-intensive Churchill River diversion and Lake Winnipeg regulation structures ahead of the generation plants that had the potential to produce quick revenue.

It was this decision that piled a debt load on the province so severe that it was necessary to triple power rates just to service it. Manitoba Hydro was placed in the unenviable position of paying out more than 50 cents of every revenue dollar just to satisfy the interest on the debt.

The financial pressure persuaded the Schreyer government to take another look at export sales. At the same time, the price of oil quadrupled, and the potential hazards of nuclear power had a noticeable impact on public opinion.

In 1977 the Manitoba government changed once more, and the Conservatives, this time under Sterling Lyon, were returned to power. The Conservatives immediately began to seek out export markets, and a new 500-kilovolt southern transmission line is expected to be finished this coming summer.

The line, described as an "aerial pipeline," is capable of producing export sales revenues of more than $100 million a year. Another southern export line, this one connecting power-hungry Nebraska, is already on the drawing boards.

Rates frozen

Last year, with the new lines, Manitoba sold more than $83 million worth of export, renewable power to the United States. The first new line should boost this total to $183 million during the coming 12 months. This is close to the yearly interest Manitoba Hydro is paying.

Probably because of the prospect for export sales, the Manitoba government recently announced that Hydro rates would be frozen for the next five years, a move that should help attract power-consuming industries to the province.

The sequence of the Nelson River power development is still controversial, and is the subject of a commission of inquiry that should report within a few months. The report should establish whether as much as $1 billion was wasted because of the change in sequence.

The figure is significant. But the prospect of export sales make make it irrevelant in the future, as Manitoba begins to tap its own version of renewable oil.

A presidential boxing match

WASHINGTON — A good political fight at the presidential level is like a heavyweight championship bout — it gets more headlines than it may deserve and promises more action than it may deliver. And everyone seems to enjoy the spectacle, no matter how senseless.

So it was this week when President Jimmy Carter, apparently tired of being threatened by Sen. Edward Kennedy, remarked to some congressmen that if Ted Kennedy ran against him in the primaries, he'd whip what The New York Times daintily referred to as the senator's - - -. That is the kind of thing that took Muhammad Ali a long way, but it may not work as well for what some ringsiders think is more than a light-heavyweight from Georgia fighting over the weight.

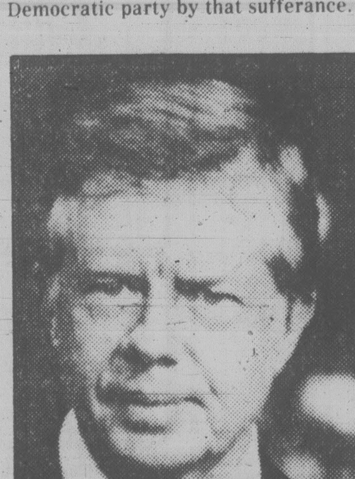
The remark obviously was not spontaneous; Carter's church thinks it so unlike anything a good Baptist should say that there is talk about reprimanding him. Moreover, those who heard it were not only permitted to let the press in on the president's belligerence. A White House aide specifically urged them to leak. That made the episode seem rather more like a deliberately planned challenge that a bit of bravado.

Dual purpose

No doubt Carter and his political strategists had two purposes in mind: to add to what appeared to be growing pressures on Kennedy to make his position clearer, and to reassure Carter supporters that their man is a tough competitor ready for a fight and confident of winning.

Kennedy took the challenge calmly enough, but in an interview with Adam Clymer of the Times remarked rather pointedly that "if I were to run, which I don't intend to, I would hope to win." And he's steadfastly maintained his enigmatic position that he "expects" and "intends" to support Carter next year.

None of this changed the basic reality that Kennedy rather than Carter now appears to be the popular favorite of the Democratic party. Polls accumulate to attest to that fact; draft Kennedy movements of varying strength can be spotted everywhere; all those disappointed by the Carter administration seem to be looking to Kennedy for salvation. And it seems more obvious every day that Carter, in Sen. Patrick Moynihan's phrase, is "governing by the sufferance" of Kennedy; he is certainly leader of the Democratic party by that sufferance.



JIMMY CARTER
. . . says he'll whip his ——

However unwisely, Kennedy seems resolved not to put himself further in or further out of the presidential race any time soon. Credible reports persist that he is either encouraging or not discouraging draft movements in the write-in campaign on his behalf in New Hampshire. The Washington Post reports, for example, that while recently campaigning in Iowa for old friend Sen. John Culver, Kennedy did not snub but dealt cordially with leaders of that state's draft Kennedy movement.

Probably Kennedy hopes the growing potential of his candidacy will give him more leverage with the Carter administration on health care and other legislation. It keeps him in position to run, moreover, if Carter should withdraw, or decline further in the polls, or suffer disastrous primary losses to Gov. Jerry Brown of California. And the senator has genuine political differences with Carter. The fact remains that his seeming availability is splitting the party and damaging the administration.

In these circumstances, the president can hardly be blamed for trying to reassert himself; the queston is whether a frontal challenge is the bast tactic, since it will hardly "scare out" Kennedy and may only offend him.

Nixon precedent

In 1960, in somewhat similar circumstances, vice president Richard M. Nixon felt his nomination by the Republican party was threatened by former governor Nelson Rockefeller of New York, then a popular newcomer with a great name. The governor had taken sharp issue with Eisenhower administration defence policies that Nixon would have to defend in the coming campaign.

Nixon dealt boldly with that situation through the surprise "Pact of Fifth Avenue." He flew to New York and struck a bargain on defence policy with Rockefeller that angered Eisenhower but gained the effective support of Rockefeller and took him out of the race. And even those Nixon backers who did not like the bargain had to admire Nixon's adroit manoeuvre.

That suggests a likelier strategy for Jimmy Carter than threats to whip Ted Kenneday' - - -. What the president needs is not just Kennedy's acquiescence or even his discouragement of draft movements. Carter needs Kennedy's support, and the Democratic party needs a resolution of its threatened split. Seeking that support and that resolution is the kind of political leadership Carter most needs to display.

Awful pollution

Imagine: you've just reached the top of a steep hill on the Gorge and you are now bicycling toward town. Your throat is on fire and you eagerly breathe in great gulps of air, as you pass the Gorge Road Hospital. It feels good to breathe after a hill like that. Just as you begin a downward slope, your nostrils are assailed with a thick mixture of smoke and gases that burns your eyes and throat. It is like being walloped in the stomach with a brick. Your body is in shock and your stomach reacts with nausea that gradually goes away over the next two hours.

Who could believe that on a major city travel way, there sits exposed such an incredible producer of raw garbage as B.C. Forests Products? Unbelief floors me on three accounts:

1. The BCFP plant exists in one of Victoria's major scenic locations.
2. It is located on a major roadway serving central Victoria.
3. The effluent blown into the air has the most acrid smell and taste of any I've ever known, and I've lived in The Lakehead, a pulp and paper mill capital. Additionally, I've never known any form of smoke in the air to burn the eyes and throat and induce nausea as this does. It is infuriating to the point of shocked silence which has been my mute condition over the past two years.

Isn't it about time the people of Victoria even heard so little as an apology for this atrocious invasion of our physical well being? And isn't it about time that the protectors of our well being, our local government, either resolve this atrocity or admit to us clearly that they don't have the power to do so? — Lora S. Bennett, 989 Admirals Road.

Brazilian disaster

Re: Brazil: Behind the 'Miracle' a Disaster (Times, June 18):

Mahatma Gandhi said: "There is enough in the world for man's needs but not for man's greed." It seems so very true for Brazil, where in spite of a miracle boom economy, the masses are getting poorer and poorer because of an unjust and inequitable distribution of resources and wealth.

The huge industrial projects have, to some extent, provided tools for the rich to exploit the poor more and more. That is why I urged in my letter (Times, June 15) that our aid must be earmarked for the poorest of the poor bretheren of our global village, facing grim spectre of hunger, starvation and disease in their day to day existence. — Ms. Hansi Bish, 20-72 Dallas Road.

Fun Day

On behalf of all our programs and staff, I would like to thank the business and general community for their support of our recent Fun Day at Stadacona Park. It was our first venture of its kind. We were impressed with the generosity and assistance of numerous local businesses, the city parks department, our volunteers and friends.

Thank you, Victoria, for supporting our work in the community. — Mrs. Joan Dumka, Administrator, Canadian Mental Health Association, Victoria Branch.

Some answers

In answer to Max Low's article on June 16, he asks two questions: "Aren't we all trying to find out who we are?" and "What's in a name?"

I know who I am so maybe I am a lot further ahead than a lot of people. The name is unimportant in itself. It's what goes with the name that is important. Should I have children or is there something in my family background that should stop me, if I knew what it was?

Who do I look like? What do I tell my children if I have been brave enough to have a family? What do I tell the doctor when he asks for my medical background? I get tired of saying "I don't know." Do I not have the right to at least my medical background?

What of my mother? Has she spent a lifetime worrying about me? Hating or not trusting the people who made her give me up? With Parent Finders' help I can let her know what happened to me but not invade her privacy unless she wants to see me. Parent Finders works quietly and carefully to protect everyone involved.

My adopted parents want me to find my mother because they love me and trust my love for them. They want me to know where I came from. We are now a closer family because of our mutual wish to know where I came from. We are all very willing to abide by my mother's wishes, whether to see me or not. With Parent Finders I can achieve this but if I was doing the searching on my own I would have to contact her personally.

I have answered your question, now please answer mine. Where do you get your coloring from? Your build? Your artistic ability? Why is your health the way it is? Does your child look like Uncle Joe or your father? You can answer these questions easily because you know where you came from. I cannot answer any of these questions. It makes you feel rather lost.

I feel sorry for the woman and her 52-year-old daughter who have never been able to accept her adoption and live with love and trust.

No one could ever replace my adopted parents in my heart. But is it wrong to want to know where I came from and be able to tell my mother, who gave me life that I care for her? — D. E. Gaiger, 3755 Seaton Road.

Track down Nazis

In the June 20 edition of the Times you have an editorial titled Why Continue the Hunt? The war was over before I was born, yet it was able to claim several uncles and cousins. My parents suffered even more. They lost brothers, sisters and friends. They gave up some of the most productive years of their lives so they could defend our country and its people (not to forget the countries in Europe who owe their existence as democracies to blood shed by the allies).

I fail to understand how you can suggest that perhaps since 30 years have passed we should somehow forget it all. The mere suggestion can only be viewed as condoning those past attrocities. With that kind of thinking gracing the pages of our newspapers can the Fourth Reich be far behind? — G. A. Boucher, Victoria.

Farm technology uprooting the Israeli dream

By MARTIN WOOLLACOTT
Manchester Guardian

JERUSALEM — The countryside of Israel resembles that of America — spaciously laid out, well cultivated, mechanized, and, above all, empty. Beneath the great blue arch of the sky the roads roll through wheat, vines, and olives: the sprinklers play, but few people are to be seen. The settlements are there, of course, away from the main roads, but the countryside is in a real sense empty. The abandoned Arab villages have been bulldozed, and Israeli farmers constitute a scant eight per cent of the country's population.

What has happened to Israeli agriculture is in some ways a model of what has happened to Israel itself — a combination of advanced technology and the shell of an earlier idealism hollowed out by change and compromise. The idea — as exemplified in the mystic principles of A. D. Gordon — was that, here, of all places, the Jew should stay close to the soil, loving and transforming it.

Transformed

Transformed it has been. Golda Meir in her autobiography recalled her kibbutz Merhavia as a wilderness of "wind, rocks, and some sunscorched fields," with chickpea mush for dinner, tinned herring for breakfast, and coffee once a week. These days, she recorded proudly: "Merhavia is a big, bustling settlement with a regional high school . . . and houses a factory for plastic pipes and a printing press." Now, as another Israeli said: "idealism can be combined with affluence."

Selected crops

The changes that have taken place in Israeli agriculture are similar to those in any developed country, but in Israel they are particularly destructive of the national ideology. The Israeli farmer is now a technician and the country is the floor of a huge and advanced agricultural factory. The kibbutzim and the Moshavim have been mechanized, commercialized, and bourgeoisified. At the beginning they were mixed farms, partly because of the ideology of self-sufficiency; now the kibbitzim, with their huge fields, have gone over to selected commercial crops, and the Moshavim are developing in the direction of intensive market gardening. The kibbutzim have also industrialized and their factories now bring them more income than their fields.

Carving out a life in the desert has become big business now

Perhaps the ultimate example of how Israeli mastery over the countryside has ceased to be a matter of hard labor is the technology of "making the desert bloom." True desert — with or without water — is incapable of sustaining plant life. But plants can be made to grow in it by an application of hydroponics which involves delivering all the necessary nutrients in a mix with the irrigation water. "The desert," an agricultural expert said, "provides merely the horizontal and vertical space for the plants."

The retreat from commune socialism has gone hand in hand with technology. Degania, the first kibbutz, is now a small town with bus services and separate suburbs. The women of the kibbutzim, never truly equal, have been pushed more and more into service operations and have little role in leadership. The famous "children's houses" are being reduced in scope. Golda Meir's husband Morris, who was mocked for painting flower designs on the walls of their hut and wanted his kids to sleep at home, would be quite welcome now.

Even in the newer kibbutzim and Moshavim, the style and standard of life is surprising. "Baby-sit for me, will you?" called out one girl in the dining room of a Golan Heights kibbutz, "I've got my extra tennis lessons this afternoon."

Pazael's kibbutz's mangoes, grapes, peppers, and aubergines go mainly to Europe where they command high off-season prices. Asked about the difficulties of life a young wife replied: "But, she went on stoutly, "A little bit of Zionism," made up for that kind of problem. Kibbutz and Moshav members, an Israeli wrote, have become "secure, affluent, and inbred." Indeed, a kibbutz, hedged against inflation and the stresses of city life, is one of the best places to be in Israel. A Jerusalem taxi-driver, after 10 years of trying city life, told me his reasons for returning to his kibbutz: "They give you everything there, even cigarettes . . . you get housed, you get everything, even a holiday in America. You don't have to worry about prices, about schools, about crime, about anything. You work eight hours a day. So what? Here I work 10, and still I don't make enough."

Israeli farms are based firmly not only on advanced technology but, in flat contradiction of their founding principles, on hired, often Arab, labor. One estimate suggests that the kibbutzim and moshavim hire 60 to 70 per cent of their labor from the "minorities," a euphemism for Arabs. A middle-aged professor of agriculture observed sadly: "You come to the fields and you see mostly Arabs working, and for the people who remember the old ideas it is not what they wanted."

New wealth

Israeli farmers, particularly from the Kibbutzim, have constituted a political and military elite from the early days and now that dominance is combined with material wealth. But just as the farmers continue to enjoy access to power and privilege out of all proportion to their numbers, so the model of what they used to be still masks Israeli society. The reality is that 90 per cent of Israeli Jews live in cities and towns; that 60 per cent of the working population is in white collar jobs; and that the magnificent Israeli landscape is the backdrop to a cramped and congested urban life.

Life in the cities is strained. There is serious social stratification with the "Ashkenazi on top, the Orientals in the middle, and the Arabs at the bottom." At the very, very top are the Ashkenazi elite, called in Israeli slang the "Bitzuistim" (doers), then an upper middle class of soldiers, academics, businessmen, politicians and civil servants, the Oriental small businessmen and craftsmen, and finally the Oriental Jewish poor.

Rise in crime

In spite of sincere and considerable efforts to integrate the oriental Jews — and to transform them in Ashkenazi or European mould — it remains the case, as an Israeli sociologist concluded, that "the Ashkenazi minority controls the whole state and benefits from a vast superiority in jobs and material well-being." What is going wrong in the cities was dramatized recently when bank raiders used grenades and automatic weapons in a robbery which, the police said, "was more like a terrorist attack."

And Israeli organized crime is a well known phenomenon which has frequently made the headlines outside Israel because it appears to foreigners as such a bizarre aspect of Israeli life.

But "ordinary" crime is on the increase as well. The new stone-faced apartment blocks with which the Israelis have ringed West Jerusalem are festooned with complicated grids and bars to keep out terrorists. In the event, they have proved more useful against Jewish burglars.

The search for normality and security in home life, as well as the machismo of Zionism, has led to another Israeli development — the retreat of Israeli women, once considered among the most liberated, into exaggerated feminity. "Israeli women," writes Lesley Hazelton, author of a despairing book on the subject, "have been shoring up the refuge of clearly feminine roles." In spite of the stereotypes, Hazelton points out that the Israeli army won't let its girl "soldiers" anywhere near combat; that women are grossly under-represented in the professions; and that the average Israeli woman is neither a parachutist nor a tractor driver, but a homebound housewife.

Underneath all the other factors — the arrival of the oriental immigrants and the consequent creation of a three-class society, the drift into white collar and service industry, the quasi-colonial relationship to the Arabs, the financial burden of the army — there is, one feels, still the guilt and worry about the land. "First we said the Bible gave it to Israel," a reserve officer said, "but we don't believe in the Bible in that way. Then we said the Arab feudals sold it. But we believe that land belongs to the tillers. Then we said that you — the British — gave it to us, but it wasn't yours to give. So what do we say now? We say we're here because we're here."

Threat of war

The irony is that, with the decline of Zionism, what keeps Israeli society together is the army, war, and the threat of war.

This is the dimension of Israeli life that keeps men young, fit, and potent, that adds a dash of glamor to white collar existence, that keeps women in their place, keeps the disadvantaged this side of open discontent, masks the failures of ideology and makes up for the difficulties and mundane harassments of the city. No one doubts the sincerity with which Israelis repudiate any love for war. But war and the army nevertheless define Israeli life and bridge the gaps and discontinuities in their society.

An ode to the nourishing nipple

By TOM DAVIES
London Observer

A storm had knocked out the hotel's power supply and guttering candles stood around everywhere. A little toddler staggered unevenly through the flickering darkness and, down near one door, another small kid was having a wail of a time tearing up a London Underground map.

Farther on down through the foyer there were crowds of women and several were breast-feeding their babies. Chomp, chomp, chomp. A small hand beat rhythmically on the mother's collar bone, the head occasionally looking up and around before returning to the nourishing nipple.

It was a conference on breast-feeding at the Kensington Hilton. Everywhere groups of women with that certain serenity about their features, a heavy-lidded contentment that comes with motherhood.

Or was it just a wild fancy of mine? No, said a breast-feeding tutor. "Women who are pregnant or have just given birth do have this certan look. They get a lot of it from eyeball to eyeball contact with a child while feeding them. Nothing else in the world matters. I think it's rather beautiful."

Along the hall a poster: A new-born baby has only three demands: warmth in the arms of a mother; food from the breast and security in the knowledge of her presence. Breast-feeding supplies all three.

Belinda Ackerman was feeding her tiny Thomas. It was, she said, the very basic feeling. "You are giving your best to your own baby. There's nothing harmful about it at all. Immediately after delivery I fed him straight away. The nurse took the mucous out of his mouth and put him there. That's where the bond starts and you get this warm liquid cosiness inside. He knew what to do straight away. The urge to suck is immediate."

Dr. Michael Church has black curly hair and eye pouches that quiver as he talks, as he does, at length and interestingly about the power of the breast and the sway that it can have. "It's just so beautifully integrated and makes the best sense medically. At birth the mother and child are separated and the child reconnects with the mother through the breast. One thing I believe is that we've messed up our personal relationships and this has come from the break between the mother and child."

Others spoke of the way in which, they believed, hospitals had taken over and interfered on a gross scale with natural childbirth; of the deadening of the instincts; the medicalization of our lives. One had the sense of a group of determined women who wanted to restore ourselves to ourselves and turn back the clock. You couldn't turn the clock back enough in my view.

Pipsqueaks of consumption

Russell Baker

Pages from a consumer's diary:

Sunday: Got up late and consumed three newspapers, four cups of coffee, two cups of tea, one egg, two strips of bacon, small quantity of cheese and Black Forest ham with mustard, two pieces of veal, eight pieces of asparagus, some lettuce, vinegar, salad oil, one glass of ginger ale, two aspirin tablets, three innings of a televised baseball game, an indeterminate quantity of natural gas and electric power, several gallons of water, one-thirtieth of a month's rental space. And so to bed.

Monday: Sorry, diary. Forgot to record in yesterday's entry that I also consumed approximately three inches of toothpaste segments of approximately one-quarter inch diameter and a small bit of after-shave lotion. Very little noteworthy consumption today except for three magazines, six staples and ten paper clips.

Tuesday: Consumed a very bad movie tonight, then home to consume a very bad novel. Otherwise, ho hum. Hamburger, onion, ketchup, shampoo, detergent, shoe leather, clothing, fabric. Dear, dear diary — will I ever consume anything really fascinating? Forgive me. I'm in the dumps. Consuming too much news, I guess.

Wednesday: Felt a strong, almost carnal desire to consume gasoline today, but could not as Aunt Pearl has borrowed the car and driven it to Vancouver. Some people do all the consuming while I have to sit here and consume TV pictures of them moping around filling stations and griping because they can't consume even more. To let off steam I consumed some cab service so the taxi could consume some gasoline for me. Nothing helps. All I can think of to consume afterwards is jello, hamburger, onion, ketchup, coffee, tea, natural gas, electricity, rental space, water, after-shave lotion, toothpaste, magazines, newspapers, John Chancellor, shampoo. In despair I consume too much gin. Maybe tomorrow I can consume some more aspirin tablets.

Thursday: What a day! Seymour asks me to join him in the consumption of cheeseburgers, milk, coffee, ketchup, onions and bacon and makes my mouth water with tales of his recent consumption of international air travel. He has consumed a ten-day Paris vacation and a huge quantity of French impertinence. Afterwards, Sandy consumes long-distance telephone service to tell me he has just consumed a $10,000 vacation on some island or other full of natives whose abuse and insults the whole family consumed without a whimper. They make it clear that they think I am not doing my bit. I promise to consume harder starting immediately. To start, I consume a Dover sole, a half bottle of French wine, a small box of strawberries, an inferior cigar and several ounces of brandy.

Friday: All right, diary, this cuts it. This morning I finish my routine consumptions — toothpaste, soap, water, shaving cream, razor blade, aspirin tablets, dim news from all over — and launch into consuming coffee, grapefruit, milk, sugar — It's so depressing I can't stand to set it all down again.

While simultaneously consuming a newspaper, I consume an article about one Martin Davidson, a veritable Ajax of consumption, a man who wants to comsume "nothing but the best." And does! He has recently consumed a Cadillac limousine, for example. What have I consumed? Toothpaste, aspirin tablets. So, a little Dover sole. What is that to consuming a Cadillac limousine?

That's not all. Davidson is even now just finishing up consuming $150,000 worth of furniture for the space he is consuming in a Manhattan loft.

This newspaper story becomes a rebuke to my own trifling powers of consumption, which, I now see, lack drive and motivation. One of Davidson's goals in the marketplace is to consume so irresistibly that he will be known "as one of Barney's top three customers."

One of Barney's Big Three! Do you know what that means, diary? Barney's is one big Manhattan men's shop. Would I take on the job of consuming myself into Barney's Big Three? You know the answer, diary. It's not in me to think big consuming.

I remember years ago when I had youth's zest for consuming and might have consumed at Doc Gardella's drugstore on West Pratt Street in Baltimore successfully enough to become known as one of the top three customers at Doc Gardella's. The shot at the big-time scared me. Instead, I settled for becoming one of the top three customers at the Coney Island Hot Dog dispensary on South Carey Street.

I still remember Doc Gardella telling me, "Keed" — Doc always called me "Keed" — "Keed," he said, "you don't have what it takes to make the Top Three in anything but hot dogs, don't go getting ideas you can ever make it in the big town."

Well, I'll tell you something, diary. I'm a guy that says never say quit consuming. As long as there's money in me, I'm not going to lay down and play dead against the heavyweights like Davidson. Tomorrow I'm going around to Irv Gorenstein's newsstand and buy up every New York Review of Books in the shop. That ought to start moving me up in the rating at Irv's. If I make the top three there, I'll start thinking about consuming a limousine. Yi! I think I had better consume two aspirins. And so to bed.

Today's Markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market fell moderately in active mid-afternoon trading.

A trading halt continued in shares of Simpsons Ltd. at the company's request. The stock last traded at $3.25. Simpsons has been holding preliminary discussions on a possible merger with Hudson's Bay Co.

Trading resumed at 12:30 p.m. in Hudson's Bay Co., which was halted along with Simpsons on Friday. The stock rose ⅛ to $28⅝ by 2 p.m..

Trading resumed at the opening in shares of Maplex Management and Holdings Ltd. following a halt Friday. Consolidated Graphics Ltd. of Toronto, a private company, plans to buy 53 per cent of Maplex Management. The stock was unchanged at $11 by 2 p.m.

Among industrials, Noranda Mines lost 1¾ to $49½, Gulf Canada 1⅜ to $61⅝, Canadian Occidental Petroleum 1 to $42, Home Oil B 1 to $66 and Union Oil of Canada ⅞ to $26½.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined broadly today, awaiting oil-exporting countries' decision on a price increase.

Losers outnumbered gainers by a 2-to-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said traders seemed to be resigning themselves to the likelihood of a substantial increase.

Charter Co. dropped 5¼ to $29⅝ and Charter warrants lost 5⅜ to $25. A Venezuelan concern is seeking to outbid Charter for a 65 per cent interest in a Bahamian refinery, but Charter said today it is still convinced it will succeed in acquiring it.

Systron Donner rose 1⅛ to $14. The company agreed to a $15-a-share takeover by a British company's U.S. subsidiary.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market fell moderately near the close of trading today. The Financial Times index was down 1.7 to 474.3. Industrials declined while oils and banks advanced and golds were mixed. Canadian shares eased.

VANCOUVER

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prices were mixed in active trading on the Vancouver stock exchange which recorded a pre-noon volume of 2,181,136 shares.

Consolidated Boundary Explorations accounted for a quarter of the volume and gained a dime to .51 on a turnover of 536,500 shares. Among other resource issues, Tintina Silver Mines also added a dime to $3.70 on 162,100 shares and Silver Chief Minerals put on .15 to $1.75 on 49,800 shares.

Con-Am Resources gained .10 to $1.70 on 47,800 shares, North South Resources lost a nickel to $2.85 and Amber Resources dropped a penny to $1.43.

Goldale Investment A led industrial traders on a volume of 3,700 shares and climbed $1-8 to $6. Northway Gestalt was steady at $1.50 on a trade of 2,300 shares and Third Dimension Industries preferred A was unchanged at .30 on 2,000 shares.

Taro Industries gained a nickel to $3.70 on 1,300 shares, Ambassador Industries was steady at .61 and Keg Restaurants remained at $1.95.

Armor Resources led curb traders with a volume of 74,500 shares and was steady at .65. Tagus Resources gained half a cent to $.48 1-2 on 37,500 shares and Cobre Exploration was unchanged at .30 on 20,000 shares.

Consolidated Reactor Uranium gained 1 1-2 cents to .32 on a trade of 32,000 shares, Hesca Resources put on .03 to .40 and American Fluorite was unchanged at $1.85.

New steel lines slated by Stelco

TORONTO (CP) — Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. has announced a $365 million expansion program to meet a rising demand for new types of steel products.

The five-year expansion program is in addition to capital already committed to completion of the new steel mill at Nanticoke on Lake Erie.

A company statement said the latest expansion plans reflect the changing market where the emphasis is on steel of higher strength and greater tolerances.

Centrepiece of the new program will be the erection of a new hot steel mill at the Lake Erie development with an initial annual capacity of about 1.2 million tons, plus new processing facilities.

At the company's Hilton Works in Hamilton, a continuous sheet galvanizing line will be built with an annual capacity of 220,000 tons.

This is the company's fourth such installation and will be supported by the expansion and modification of the cold mill and ancillary facilities.

Annual meeting is play time

TORONTO (CP) — Most of the shareholders at the annual meeting of Irwin Toy Ltd. on Friday could hardly wait for the business to end.

They wanted to play with the toys.

About 100 children, members of Irwin's unique Junior Shareholders Club, attended the meeting, prompting one father to ask president Arnold Irwin whether he approached the board of education to declare a holiday.

The children sat, some quietly, through the reports and financial statements, giggling when they voted. When business ended, a large red curtain swept aside revealing Irwin's latest line of toys, and the part-owners stampeded to the rear.

Later, they celebrated the company's 86-per-cent increase in profit to $1.25 million or 51 cents a share in 1978 over the previous year with hamburgers, chocolate milk and ice cream.

The club, with 500 members ranging from toddlers to 15-year-olds, was started nine years ago to the benefit of both the children and the company, said executive vice-president S. Macdonald Irwin.

"It's hard for adults to get their minds down to the level of a seven-year-old," he said.

The junior shareholders receive letters explaining what the company is doing, in language children can understand. Those who show up at annual meetings are asked for their comments on the latest Irwin toys, and get to take one home.

And of course they receive the annual dividend.

More than 10 per cent of the company's shareholders are children, although they are a negligible voting block.

Arnold Irwin told the shareholders the company expects 1979 to be even stronger than 1978 with strong increases in toy sales and good returns in the sporting goods and leisure products divisions.

Business

Marks & Spencer

Despite worse than expected first-quarter losses, Marks and Spencer Canada Inc. of Montreal expects to make a profit this year for the first time in four years, chairman Sir Marcus Sieff said.

Sir Marcus told the annual meeting that reduced losses from Marks and Spencer stores and higher profits from Peoples and D'Allaird's chains should improve the company's fortunes.

The Marks and Spencer stores ordered too little merchandise too late, he said.

He attributed the problems to "a lack of experience in the Canadian market and the necessity to build up relations with Canadian manufacturers." Moves have been made to correct the problems, he said.

Marks and Spencer, with 56 stores, will open six more this year.

Sir Marcus said the company will stop expansion until supply problems are solved.

"One of our problems has been that we haven't properly digested the stores we have."

Strong sales growth in the Peoples and D'Allaird's chains is continuing in the second quarter, he said. Peoples, with 63 stores, will open three more in 1979. D'Allaird's will add three stores to its 61.

Ogilvie

Ogilvie Mills Ltd. has announced consolidated net earnings for the year ended April 30, 1979, of $16.5 million, or $5.34 a share, up from $10.5 million, or $3.36 a share, for 1978.

The company attributed the increase to "a major turnaround" at its Laura Secord confectionary subsidiary — due to the success of the company's new candy bars — as well as continued improvements in the company's flour and feeds divisions, and higher earnings at another subsidiary, Ault.

Mine 'waste' now profit

TORONTO (CP) — Increased demand for once-unwanted cobalt may mean bigger returns from the Agnico-Eagle Mines Ltd. silver mines at Cobalt Camp in Ontario.

The company is completing negotiations with Noranda Mines Ltd. for the joint recovery of cobalt from the properties, Agnico president Paul Penna told the annual meeting Friday.

New interest has been sparked in cobalt, a by-product in silver mining, by the sharp increase in price to $30 a pound from $2 a pound six years ago.

Penna said the deal involves "big money" for Agnico. The agreement calls for cash contributions from Noranda equal to Agnico's capital costs for the development, with Agnico taking 51 per cent of the profits after the contributions are finished.

Gordon Kirk, manager of the Agnico's silver operations, said recovery of cobalt will allow mining of lower grades of silver ore which had been considered uneconomical. "Cobalt has changed the picture considerably."

A spokesman for Noranda Exploration Co. Ltd. said the proposed agreement calls for Noranda to make an initial contribution of $500,000. Depending on the success of the cobalt recovery, development costs could be as high as $7 million, he said.

Penna said the company is installing a secondary crushing plant at its Joutel mine in Quebec to increase the milling rate of gold ore to 1,500 tons daily from 1,000 tons.

Gas stations going the way of rumble seat

TORONTO (CP) — The corner gas station is fast going the way of the Studebaker and rumble seats.

The signs are here: the doughnut shops breeding on the corners where the guy who knew his customers' names and cleaned the windshields used to be; and big-volume, multi-pump gas bars where the only employee outside the service bays is sitting at a cash register watching self-service sales ring up.

For the urban motorist filling up, the future is more of those big stations, whose locations are dictated by market research. And when he hears his engine groan, he'll head to a specialist with diagnostic equipment rivalling that of a mid-sized hospital.

The closing-out process of the neighborhood service station is in full swing. The number of retail gas outlets in Canada dropped to between 26,000 and 27,000 last year from 34,000 in 1972.

"The day of the generalist is gone — the good old guy who can put a car together with baling wire," says Ron McCurdy, co-ordinator of retailing for Gulf Canada Ltd. of Toronto.

"Cars are more complex, more like a TV set. The dealer has to be highly trained and have more sophisticated equipment."

Many gas stations opened in the post-Second World War boom, when cars, gas, land and labor were cheap.

Today operators face expensive taxes, rents, maintenance costs and labor bills. New cars require less servicing, and specialist outlets dealing only in transmissions or exhausts are thriving to the detriment of the neighborhood station.

And with gas prices going up in leaps and bounds, consumers are switching to smaller cars and driving them less.

"The number of vehicles has continued to rise," says Charles Hayles, assistant general manager of marketing for Imperial Oil Ltd. of Toronto.

"But with consumption per vehicle falling, demand for gasoline has been growing at only one to two per cent a year. A few years from now we expect the demand to be static."

Accordingly, oil companies are going through a process variously called consolidation, purification or cleaning out.

David Prowse, executive director of the Automotive Trades Association, representing service station and body shop operators, says too many stations are being closed.

"If you took away government and consumer pressure, the oil companies would like to have even fewer stations," says Prowse.

"They would like to see them open 24 hours a day, seven days a week, with lines up and down the street. What they are out to do is liquidate their real estate investments; it's an excellent time for them to do that."

Self-serve stations now account for 40 per cent of gas sales by the major companies. Companies expect that to soon rise to 50 per cent, the roughly-estimated saturation point of the market.

New raise in woods offer

The B.C. forest industry boosted its wage offer to coastal woodworkers for the second time in as many days Sunday.

The move increased hopes the tense negotiations can be settled without a strike.

Jack Munro, spokesman for the International Woodworkers of America, said the increases in the companies' wage offers, coupled with improvements in vacations, show the forest industry has a real desire to negotiate seriously.

Forest Industrial Relations, negotiating for the 120 forest companies, increased its wage offer to 70 cents from 60 cents an hour in the first year of a two-year contract Saturday and then added a further five cents to their offer Sunday, bringing the first year's increase to 75 cents.

The companies also offered a 7½-per-cent increase in the second year, up a full per cent from previous offers. The companies sweetened the pot by half a per cent Saturday and added another half a per cent Sunday.

But while Munro was more hopeful Sunday, he cautioned there are still serious obstacles which must be tackled before any settlement.

The union originally asked for a $1.50-an-hour raise on a base rate of $8.16 in a one-year contract, but both industry spokesman and Munro indicated that the agreement will cover two years.

"We haven't officially done it, but we've put out indicators that if a two-year contract is attractive enough we'd be interested," said Munro, the IWA's western regional president.

Chris Crombie, spokesman for Forest Industrial Relations, said the contract would definitely run two years.

The pressure on both sides has been increased by wildcat walkouts throughout the coastal region as woodworkers express their dissatisfaction at working without a contract. Their contract expired June 15.

Wildcat walkouts, coming on the heels of an 88-per-cent strike vote, are a traditional tool by workers to speed up negotiations, but Munro said the spot action could escalate into a general strike if a settlement isn't reached soon.

As well as negotiating for the 28,000 to 30,000 forest workers in the coastal region, the IWA is also negotiating with the Interior Forest Labor Relations Association on behalf of about 7,000 workers in the southern Interior.

Contracts for the southern Interior workers, which expire June 30, and for northern Interior workers, which expire Aug. 30, usually closely follow the settlement on the coast.

Also closely watching the IWA negotiations are representatives of the province's 13,000 pulp and paper workers and the 15 companies they work for. Both groups now have the same base rate.

Crombie also represents the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau which is negotiating with both the Canadian Paperworkers' Union (CPU), representing about 7,500 workers, and the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers Union (PPWC), which represents the rest.

He said company and PPWC representatives met Saturday and were offered the same increase as the IWA was offered by Forest Industrial Relations. More meetings are to be held Monday.

Negotiations with the CPU have broken off and no new talks are scheduled. The union is to take a strike vote this week.

Sidney Island drive boosted

The Sidney Island Committee has stepped up its campaign to buy all of Sidney Island for a federal or provincial park.

Campaign secretary Pam Jones said the committee is disappointed that the provincial government in May bought only 105 acres to be added to the existing Sidney Spit Marine Park.

The purchase left 1 680 acres still in private hands, she noted.

"It's the only opportunity to save the last unspoiled island near an expanding metropolitan area," Jones said.

Jones said the way the Saanich peninsula is developing, every bit of the island will be be needed in 10 years.

She said the committee is still seeking public contributions to its park fund.

A donation of $500 from A. J. Childs, on behalf of Burns Foods Corp. Ltd, has already been received.

Contributions may sent to the Sidney Island Fund, Box 6007, Postal Station C, Victoria, V8P 5L4. Income tax receipts will be issued for donations of $5 or more.

Bennett opens Folkfest tonight

Premier Bill Bennett will begin this year's Folkfest activities tonight when he opens the inter-cultural village in Centennial Square.

Bennett will start the festivities at 6:45 p.m. and the village, consisting of displays and food stalls from many different cultures found in Canada, will come to life.

Folkfest is presented by the Inter-Cultural Association of Greater Victoria to celebrate Canada Week. The celebration will last until July 2.

More than 30,000 people visited the international village last year, which represented 12 different food displays from countries including China, India, Ireland, Hungary and the Ukraine.

During the eight-day event 44 groups and 28 individual artists will perform on the main stage in the centre of the square.

Performers from around the province will include the Leudenschied Choir from Germany, a Japanese children's group from Kelowna and the Indian Friendship dancers from Duncan.

Special days and events throughout the week will honor the International Year of the Child, Canada Unity Day and Canada Day. Detailed Folkfest programs will be available from any of the kiosks in the square.

Boat loaded with Vietnamese refugees rests alongside Malaysian naval vessel

'Get tough' policy forces 55,000 refugees to sea

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — Malaysia forced 13,000 Vietnamese refugees in 60 boats out into international waters in the last week, raising to 55,000 the number expelled since Jan. 1, the government announced today.

Kassim Ahmad, the parliamentary secretary to the foreign ministry, announced the numbers while answering questions in Parliament. He said the expulsions were in line with the government's get-tough policy of refusing sanctuary to new arrivals. Malaysia already has 76,000 Vietnamese in crowded camps.

Today, Malaysian authorities forced four small refugee boats out to sea and held two others in their stepped-up effort to check the mounting refugee tide.

Eyewitnesses said Malaysian soldiers loaded 319 refugees into four small boats from the northeast Merang village and a police boat escorted them to international waters. The authorities reportedly reprovisioned the boats with food and water before pushing the refugees out to sea.

It was reported that the refugees, who arrived recently from Vietnam, were taken from their makeshift camp on the beach and put on the boats. They said the refugees did not resist.

A Malaysian naval vessel today continued to hold two boats with 600 refugees off Kuala Trengganu, 300 kilometres northeast of Kuala Lumpur, to prevent them from coming ashore.

One of the boats was damaged and the women and children in it were transfered to the navy ship. The boats were tied to the large navy ship while repairs were being made to the damaged boat.

Refugee officials said they had requested permission to bring the Vietnamese ashore while they awaited resettlement in another country.

But the Malaysians told them the refugees on the two boats being repaired were "as good as towed back to sea already."

Western refugee officials here said 500 Vietnamese in two boats were towed back into international waters on Sunday. Reporters who talked to some of the refugees before they left were told the two boats were attacked three times by Thai pirates during the five-day crossing from Vietnam.

Beside the economic drain of the refugee influx, Malaysia authorities fear many will not find new homes in other countries and will remain in Malaysia upsetting the fragile balance between the predominant Malay Moslem community and the ethnic Chinese and Indians who make up the other half of the population.

But a Vietnamese official, who arrived here today to discuss the problem with Malaysian authorities, said Vietnam will not take back any refugees, even if they are cast adrift.

Meanwhile in Bangkok, Premier Kriangsak Chomanan said today Thailand will temporarily halt the forced repatriation of Cambodian refugees pending the outcome of a proposed conference on the Indochina refugee problem.

Earlier this month, Thailand forced 45,000 Cambodians back across the border into their war-battered homeland and said it plans to sent back the other 30,000 still in Thai camps.

Exiles urge end of Cuba embargo

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A group of Cuban exiles, claiming to represent the majority view of the 1 million Cubans who have left their homeland, is urging President Carter to normalize relations with Havana.

The Cuban-American Committee for the Normalization of Relations with Cuba, said Sunday in a letter to Carter that the administration could begin the normalization process by removing the U.S. trade ban on the island nation.

Cuban President Fidel Castro has made lifting the 1962 trade ban the key condition for moving toward normal relations with the United States. The United States, however, says no improvement is possible as long as Cuba maintains large military forces in Africa.

The letter to Carter was signed by more than 10,000 Cubans from the major exile communities in the United States, particularly in southern Florida, New York, New Jersey, southern California and Puerto Rico.

"We urge you to move towards a normalization of relations with Cuba," the group told Carter in the letter.

"Despite the pressures and even fear existing in many Cuban-American communities, we feel that a majority of Cuban-Americans are in favor of such normalization."

"It is our opinion," the letter added, "that the reunification of Cuban families and the situation of political prisoners in Cuba constitute the foremost concerns among Cuban-Americans.

"We also believe that the best way to deal with these concerns is to move towards full normalization of relations. The end of the embargo would certainly be a constructive step in that direction."

Iran nationalizes insurance firms

TEHRAN (AP) — The revolutionary government nationalized Iran's 15 privately-owned insurance companies today, including two foreign firms controlled by Britain and the Soviet Union, Radio Tehran announced.

The takeover came 16 days after the Islamic regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini seized the country's 27 private banks in a move it said would stabilize the economy, still reeling from the revolution that ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in February.

Radio Tehran said Khomeini's Islamic revolutionary council ordered Premier Mehdi Bazargan to run the insurance companies according to "the rules of Islam" and in a way "beneficial to the people."

The announcement made no mention of compensation for the companies' stockholders and did not say how assets will be handled. After taking over the banks on June 8, the government said shareholders would be compensated at a later date, but no details have been given.

The insurance companies are reported hard hit by damage claims stemming from the year-long revolution and by the general economic slump brought on by it. The government has been trying to help by insisting that shipments of Iranian oil be insured by Iranian firms.

Iranians are reported to have been paying a total of about $320 million a year in insurance premiums. The government insurance company handles more than one-fourth of the business, and the private companies handle the rest.

The newspaper Bamdad reported that three more men were executed by a revolutionary firing squad today, raising the number put to death since the ouster of the shah to 290.

The three men were executed in the northeastern city of Mashhad, but the report gave no information about their crimes. It said seven other persons were sentenced to jail terms and floggings, ranging from 10 years and 200 lashes to five years and 100 strokes.

The newspaper reported that two men convicted of rape were sentenced to 700 lashes in Qazvin, south of Tehran. Usually when so many lashes are ordered, they are given in instalments.

Two other men tried at a televised show trial in Tehran, Bahman Naderipour, 35, and Fereidoun Travangar, 25, were convicted and executed Sunday.

Fresh violence in Kampala

NAIROBI (AP) — The five-day-old cabinet of Ugandan President Godfrey Binaisa reported fresh anti-government violence in and around Kampala, the capital, today, including a mob attack on a police station and a personal assault on Defence Minister Yoweri Museveni.

Internal Affairs Minister Paul Muwanga blamed an underground movement he said was opposed to the establishment of democracy. In a broadcast by Uganda government radio, monitored in Nairobi, he appealed to Ugandans to heed a ban on demonstrations.

Residents of Kampala said there appeared to be wide support for a general strike called by supporters of Yusufu Lule, whom Binaisa replaced as president on Wednesday. They said shops were closed, few persons were at their jobs and streets were deserted.

The radio said the attack on Museveni took place on the road between Mpigi, about 30 kilometres southwest of Kampala, and Natete, a suburb of the capital. It said a crowd attacked the police station and a house at Mpigi.

Police were reported sent to the scene but no further details were immediately available.

The radio said disturbances resumed Saturday night, after a two-day interval. It said demonstrators over the weekend told Ugandans to stay away from work today.

Larger groups gathered Sunday night and, the broadcast said, crowds blocked roads this morning and stoned persons taking food to markets.

Three persons were killed and about 50 injured last week when Lule's tribal supporters took to the streets to protest his ouster by the National consultative Council, the policy arm of the ruling Uganda National Liberation Front. The council complained that Lule had failed to obtain approval for two rounds of cabinet appointments this month, and was seeking dictatorial powers.

Up to 20,000 persons, mostly Baganda, marched in Kampala on Thursday, calling for the reinstatement of Lule, 67, a former teacher, and the removal of Binaisa, 59, a lawyer.

Thousands of gays march on coasts

NEW YORK (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of homosexual men and women marched up Fifth Avenue in New York and Market Street in San Francisco on Sunday to celebrate the 10th anniversary of what many say was the start of the gay rights movement in the United States.

In San Francisco, an estimated 200,000 male and female homosexuals walked to a rally at the Civic Centre plaza — the scene of last month's bloody confrontation between homosexual-rights supporters and police. Fighting broke out after former city supervisor Dan White was found guilty of manslaughter in the shooting deaths of Mayor George Moscone and Harvey Milk, the city's first avowed homosexual supervisor; the protesters said White should have been convicted of a more serious charge.

Mexico grabs 100 smuggle suspects

TIJUANA, Mexico (UPI) — Mexican federal agents and Army troops during the weekend arrested more than 100 people suspected of smuggling illegal aliens into the United States.

The suspects, taken to an Army post late Saturday and early Sunday, reportedly were "under intense interrogation."

The action followed strong criticism by Roberto de la Madrid, governor of Northern Baja California, of Mexico's failure to control the illegal flow of its own citizens across the border.

Construction was to begin today on a $3.5 million border fence intended to reduce the number of Mexicans crossing the border from Tijuana to Ysidro, Calif.

De la Madrid promised added police protection for workers constructing the barrier.

Ronald Cameron, chief Border Patrol agent for the San Diego area, said he had heard of de la Madrid's promise, but received no official word of help from Mexico.

Divers try to plug well

CIUDAD DEL CARMEN, Mexico (UPI) — Frogmen dove into the inky black depths of the Gulf of Mexico early today in a desperate last try to cap a burning, leaking oil well before it becomes the worst spill in history.

Houston oil disaster expert Paul "Red" Adair's divers were trying to find a way to shut off a new blowout at the crippled Ixtoc I well 67 kilometres off Ciudad del Carmen.

On Sunday, they briefly stopped the runaway well, but emergency valves could not hold the pressure and it blew out again.

Officials said that the valves apparently are ruined and there may be no quick way to stop the gusher at the wellhead.

The fire raging over the well was put out after the gusher was stopped, but it had to be relit after the new blowout. The fire is burning off potentially explosive gas and about half of the oil that is escaping.

If Adair's men cannot find a new trick to plug the gusher, the only way to control it will be to drill two slant wells to intercept the giant reserve below Ixtoc I, authorities said.

They added that they already have started drilling the relief wells, but it will take at least until early September before they can be completed.

Vaudeville kept alive in this retirement home

ENGLEWOOD, N.J. (AP) — Vaudeville never died. It just moved to a 12-acre estate where 30 retired thespians keep it alive with their reminiscences and occasional disputes over who should have received top billing 50 years ago.

Artistic temperament is understood at the Actors Fund Home, where artists-in-residence include slapstick comzdians, bit actors, stage hands, and dancers from an earlier era.

"People in the theatre have a language of their own and we like to be with our peers," says Ted Erwin, 69 and a veteran of more than 300 films.

"We're pretty much on our own all of our lives — on the road a lot," Erwin says of the showman's lot." We don't form many lasting friendships. We learn to depend on ourselves."

Each guest has his own room, and there are connecting rooms for married couples.

Each room has a television set, compliments of composer Richard Rodgers. The story goes that he donated the sets to reduce arguments among guests.

Among the more famous residents is 95-year-old Joe Smith of the vaudeville comedy team of Smith and Dale. He and Charlie Dale, who died in 1971, moved here in 1967. The Sunshine Boys, Neil Simon's play and movie, is loosely based on their lives.

Glenn Anders, an actor who appeared in three Pulitzer Prize-winning plays on Broadway, also lives in the home.

Although all are retired from entertainment, nmt all are idle. Smith, an entertainer since he was 14, frequently lectures and performs the vaudeville routines he and Dale wrote 60 years ago.

"Nearly everyone was famous in his or her day," says Gloria MacRae, who manages the home with her husband, Robert.

Naked ladies, yes: violence, no

By GREGORY JENSEN
United Press International

When a Los Angeles television station imported a week of British TV programs recently, it had to snip out scenes of naked ladies and bleep out bad language.

It's a good thing the British shows weren't French. Or German, Italian or Danish.

If they had been, Americans would have seen a show's title, but sometimes not much more.

Most European television takes a much broader view of what is permissible on the small screen than "the land that attracted the Puritans," as a British TV critic recently termed the United States.

The puritan spirit also rules such countries as Spain or Greece or Norway. But elsewhere in Europe, UPI correspondents report, nudity is normal. It's even showing up on Soviet TV.

Nobody worries much about language and sometimes anything — anything — goes.

"Since sexual liberation took hold in Denmark, even intercourse on the screen doesn't create much disturbance," says UPI correspondent Kirsten Lundberg.

"Nude men and women in bed are pretty standard fare" on West German television, says correspondent Wellington Long. "Indeed, no TV film that hopes for a mass audience here can do without such a scene."

Many European TV systems are incredibly strict about violence.

Sweden and Norway ban boxing from their screens, even amateur bouts. Sweden dropped a Hollywood cop series, tops in American ratings, when it became "too violent." One of Austria's channels briefly banned auto racing as excessively violent. West German networks regularly snip scenes from American shows, considering violence worse than full frontal nudity.

Some European nations apply these same rigid standards to sex, nudity and swearing on the small screen.

"Spanish censors still measure morality by the centimeters of bare skin showing," said Spanish TV critic Jose Ramon Perez.

But many ordinary on-the-air TV channels in Europe have an anything-goes approach found only on some cable-TV systems in the United States.

"We are not against naked women," said Yugi Dobrokhotov, chief of the foreign department of Mosfilm, which supplies much Soviet TV fare. "We have in our movies violence, love — everything," though he added there are "proper limits to everything."

The British Broadcasting Corp. (BBC) recently transmitted a documentary largely photographed in a nudist camp.

"On their visits to Britain," said the Daily Express the other day, "Americans are aghast at how liberal our attitude is to nude scenes on television."

In Italy private television stations now muscling in on the state monopoly leave no holds barred. One recently carried a quiz series in which housewives removed one garment each time a listener answered a question correctly. It was very popular.

"You can see and hear anything on French television that you can see or hear at the movies, including films forbidden to anyone under 18," reported correspondent Arthur Higbee.

Sweden, which has a reputation for permissiveness, is less relaxed than one might think.

"Pornography is a thing we do not approve of," said Swedish TV executive Thomas Alexanderson. Added fellow executive Herbert Soedestrom, "We are so rigid concerning violence we don't permit anything at all."

Switzerland, Austria, Finland and most countries in Eastern Europe steer a middle course between permissiveness and puritanism, the UPI survey showed. Almost all European networks reserve sexier or more violent shows for viewing after the kids are in bed.

France and Belgium project a small white square on one corner of the screen as a warning that upcoming material might not be suitable for youngsters. Not that this always works.

"All it means to my 12-year-old is that this is something she doesn't want to miss," said a mother in France's Brittany region. "Then I can either give in and let her watch or have a family quarrel on my hands."

Wild West tribute

BRADFORD, England (AP) — About 100 Britons wearing costumes ranging from feathered Indian headdresses to U.S. Cavalry blues on Sunday attended a memorial service for actor John Wayne in Bradford Cathedral.

"I've been a Wild West fan all my life. I had to do something to commemorate such a great man," said Rita Byrne, a Bradford housewife. She organized the tribute for Wayne, who died of cancer June 12.

Mrs. Byrne, 48, is known as Marie Del Rio in the Bradford Wild Bunch. It is one of the many British Wild West groups with members who dress in cowboy costumes, meet in pubs and clubs, hold quick-draw contests and give charity shows.

Bill Ellison, 60, also of Brafford attended the service dressed as Gen. George Custer. "I wanted to pay my last respects because John Wayne was such a gentleman," he said.

Their tribute included a eulogy to the "two-fisted integrity" of Wayne, a collection for a cancer research fund, a bugler playing The Last Post and a three-gun salute on the cathedral steps.

of the world... that my government is disposed to receive initiatives of the OAS."

As Somoza spoke Sunday, National Guard aircraft prepared to resume bombing a five-square-kilometre area of eastern Managua held by the guerrillas.

Although the government has bombed rural areas in the south to combat a Sandinista invasion from neighboring Costa Rica, Saturday was the first evidence of National Guard use of bombs, rather than small fragmentation rockets launched from the wings of aircraft, in urban areas.

As residents of middle-class suburbs in the hills around Managua watched in awe, government helicopters Saturday hovered at several thousand feet over the low-lying slum areas of guerrilla concentrations while large, clearly visible bombs were rolled out of their hatches.

After what seemed interminable, slow motion drops to earth, the bombs exploded with a vibration that shook windows three miles away.

Guard patrols Sunday prohibited all entry into the area, including that of Red Cross workers seeking to aid the wounded. At midafternoon, the government radio repeated Saturday's call for civilian evacuation of the eastern neighborhoods of Meneses, Maria Auxiliadora, Santa Rosa, Blandon, El Enden, Louis Somoza, Bello Horizonte and Nicarao before resuming the bombing.

Informed sources reported that a Sandinista plane, one of several small aircraft the guerrillas are believed to have, dropped supplies early Sunday to rebels barricaded inside the area. As the plane flew over the blacked-out city at approximately 2:30 a.m., the night shook for 10 minutes with deafening but apparently unsuccessful government fire at the plane from the ground.

Meanwhile, after 25 days of sporadic fighting, the city of Masaya, less than 20 miles south of Managua, fell to Sandinista forces Saturday night as National Guard troops evacuated the garrison there. Sunday, Masaya was calm, but residents were expecting a major effort to rout the guerrillas either by air bombardment or by artillery fired from a National Guard fort on a hill overlooking the city.

Masaya has seen some of the harshest fighting of any city in Nicaragua during the 15 months of the revolt. Guardsmen in the Masaya garrison withstood dozens of attacks, as recently as last week.

Okanagan woods fire

PENTICTON (CP) - About 60 firefighters aided by bulldozers and waterbombers battled for about eight hours Sunday to control a forest fire burning near Okanagan Falls, about 20 kilometres south of here.

The fire burned fewer than 100 acres of grass and brush before being brought under control. No buildings were endangered.

Tokyo security tight as Clark plane lands

On board the aircraft, the prime minister continued to wear the yellow orlon, cardigan sweater that was his trademark during the election campaign.

And on a stroll through Vancouver Airport's main concourse Sunday afternoon during a refuelling stop few people recognized the slim young man in the light grey suit.

The leaders of Britain, France, West Germany and Italy are expected Wednesday.

The two-day summit, an annual meeting of the world's seven richest democracies to discuss world problems, begins Thursday. Clark will spend the next two days in private meetings with leaders of other delegations and in pre-summit briefings.

During the flight, Clark told journalists he was mystified by published reports Sunday that he will pledge a seven-per-cent cut in Canadian energy consumption.

Clark said he made no such statement, adding that he had never expressed any intention of going along with the plan if another summit participant proposed it.

However, the prime minister recognized that Canada will be under considerable pressure from other consuming nations to put the brakes on its appetite for oil.

On a per capita basis, Canadians consume more energy than any other people. Latest figures (1976) show the average Canadian used the equivalent of 8.5 tons of oil a year. This compared with 8.1 tons for the United States, 4.2 tons for West Germany and 3.1 tons for Japan.

At the same time, the price Canadians pay for their oil — $12.75 a barrel — is the lowest among the summit nations. Canadians pay only about two-thirds of world oil prices because the government provides generous oil price subsidies. The domestic price is scheduled to rise to $13.75 on July 1.

Clark said he is not opposed in principle to the idea of using the summit to come to an agreement to reduce energy consumption, but was not prepared to put a figure on this objective.

The misunderstanding, he said, had probably arisen when Clark was being interviewed last week by Japanese journalists before leaving for the summit. There may have been translation difficulties.

Wearing his favorite yellow. Cardigan sweater, and an open-necked shirt, Clark appeared relaxed on the flight, chatting with reporters about the summit and about his first month as prime minister.

He does not expect to propose any bold policy initiative at the summit.

Recognizing the sensitivity of his first foreign trip as prime minister and the importance of making a favorable impression on other summit leaders, he hopes to play a fairly low-key role.

Clark said he must also keep in mind the urging of the business community to try and walk a middle path between the danger that would result from profligate energy consumption and the economic repercussions that would result from a sudden jump in oil prices.

Atkey readies youth jobs plan

eral Labor Intensive Program), had been scrapped by the former government many months before the campaign.

Atkey said his government has reservations about such grant programs because they provide only temporary jobs. He wants the new policy to emphasize incentives to the private sector, such as tax credits and wage subsidies, more extensively than Liberals allowed.

"In this respect I'm taking a chance," Atkey said. "I'm hoping that the private sector will be a good and productive partner. I hope they won't let me down."

He said the policy will "indicate some rather favorable developments in private sector job creation. That's one area where we hope to have some dramatic achievements."

He cited plans to combine and "beef up substantially" three existing programs which provide subsidies to employers rather than grants to community organizations or individuals who come up with project ideas.

Ironically, one of the three programs — Employment Tax Credit — was continually criticized by his Conservative colleagues in the last Parliament when they were in opposition. Lincoln Alexandar, now minister of labor, was the toughest critic, saying the program was a dismal failure.

'Name of the game is to have a job down the road'

80% of the trades training course grads at Camosun College found work last year

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

About 80 per cent of the graduates of Camosun College's trades training program last year have found employment.

"The name of the game is to have a job down the road," says program director John Drysdale.

He said in an interview at the Interurban Road campus that at times it is difficult to balance the demand for training against the jobs that are available.

"We don't grind them out in such numbers that we flood the market," Drysdale says, but on the other hand he feels there should always be a surplus of available workers in any occupation.

It is encouraging to hear him say during a tour of the facilities that all those taking the business machine repair course, for example, will find jobs. Or that of 38 who started the cook training course, which is almost finished, only three are left.

The rest found jobs and left the course.

He points to an indication that the building industry is not totally dead, and that nearly half of those taking the architecural drafting course have already been placed.

"Things are looking good," says Drysdale. "There is too much bloody pessimism out there."

The trades program incorporates three basic kinds of courses — pre-apprenticeship, pre-employment and upgrading.

In the first category are carpentry, plumbing-steamfitting, auto body repair, auto mechanics and business machine repair.

The pre-employment courses include electronics, cook training, welding, architectural drafting, map drafting, diesel mechanics, small engine repair and power engineering.

The upgrading variety could be in almost any category where there is an expressed need for improving their skills.

The pre-apprentice programs deal with those so-called "designated trades" which teach newcomers their skills through three or four-year apprenticeships.

During that time, the apprentice works on job sites alongside journeymen and returns to the trades school for a month, six weeks or perhaps two months each year, depending on the trade, for specific courses and training.

The pre-apprenticeship courses are generally between five to six months long and geared to providing the potential journeyman with some of the basic skills of his trade.

One of the problems during the current depressed state of the construction industry is that those taking the pre-apprenticeship program and even those working as apprentices are having a hard time either getting started with a company or finding enough work to complete their training.

The pre-employment programs are for those interested in non-designated trades.

These courses are generally 10 months and in most cases provide sufficient training that an individual can move right into a job.

Drysdale, who has been associated with the trades school for the past 21 years, says Camosun's is the third largest in the province behind the Vancouver Vocational Institute and the Pacific Vocational Institute in Burnaby.

Yearly enrolment has varied from 400 to 725 and the courses are open to anyone 16 years old and up who has completed high school.

There is one stipulation: a young person must have been out of regular school for at least a year. Drysdale says this gives them time to get a better idea what they want to do.

He says the standards at the college are going up as there are more and more young people who have completed high school.

Earlier this year, the provincial government appointed a task force to study the whole area of trades training.

Right now the pre-apprenticeship and pre-employment course "produce a confusing mix of training programs," the ministries of labor and education said in launching the task force.

The force's first report was due June 18 but has not been released and a second report is due by the end of July.

Camosun College principal Lloyd Morin pictures trades schools at the hub of a wheel.

At the end of the spokes are the employers, unions and students wanting training.

"Somehow we have to keep the wheel turning," he says, adding that it takes a co-operative effort in order to ensure not only that jobs are available for graduating students but that training is given for skilled jobs in currently unforeseen areas.

Morin says many employers simply judge their employee needs by existing job vacancies.

"Educational institutions have the responsibility of looking down the road to anticipate what the needs are going to be."

Often employees have to be shown that their business would improve if they had a skilled person in a specific area, Morin said.

He pooh-poohs those who recommend the most efficient way for trades schools to operate is to do manpower surveys and then train only a certain number of people to fill forecasted positions.

There has never been a manpower analysis done that had any credibility, he says.

Camosun is often faced with the dilemma of being approached by people who feel they have a right to be trained as skilled tradesmen even though there may be no jobs available.

Their argument is that they have the same right to learn a trade as they have to go to university to learn history or archeology, Morin said.

"They ask, 'Why don't I have the same right to the trough? If there are no jobs, that's my problem.' "

Aftermath of Claremont graduation party: 'Noisy but not destructive'

Meeting tonight to air action on grad party

The North and South Saanich Agricultural Society meets tonight to decide what action can be taken to recover the cost of damages which resulted from a graduation dance Friday night.

The dance, which left the fairground hall a shambles Saturday morning, has generated a storm of protest among society members.

Maurice Atkins, a director of the society, said today a special meeting will be held tonight to decide what action can be taken. The dance was organized by graduating students from Claremont high school.

Atkins said he was aghast at the mess left by the students and Russ Simpson, a former society member who went to the hall the next morning called it "a case of organized vandalism."

"It was disgusting. What the hell are we educating, what are we turning out who would do this kind of thing?"

Sandy Peden, one of six adult chaperones at the party, and Central Saanich Police Chief Bob Miles, who said he spent five hours outside the hall checking youths for liquor and keeping down rowdyism, denied things were as bad as painted.

"It was noisy, very noisy," Miles said, "but it wasn't destructive."

Miles called the controversy a "tempest in a teapot."

Peden agreed the hall was extremely messy after the dance, which was attended by about 250 youths, broke up at 2:30 a.m. but claimed the only damage done was to two windows in the front which were broken, and to one "rickety old table" which was overturned and had its legs torn off.

Peden said about a dozen youths who weren't students of Claremont gate-crashed the dance and blamed some of the trouble on them.

Peden said he arrived at the dance at 11:30 p.m. and noted police outside were confiscating liquor at the door.

He said he made no effort to seize the liquor because many of the youths were over 19 and it would have been impossible to clear the hall even though many of the students attending were underage. The student group did not have a liquor licence.

Simpson said the parquet dance floor, only installed a year ago, was littered with broken beer and whiskey bottles.

Miles said officers seized between 10 to 15 cases of beer and a number of bottles.

Peden noted the students had paid for cleaners to come in the next morning to clean up the mess. But the cleaners were initially prevented from doing the job when society members showed up and told them to hold off until the press could take pictures.

Prisoned in Ozette clay, a treasure

LAST WEEK I TOLD YOU how we came to Ozette; the archeologist's treasure-house on the ocean side of Washington state's Olympic Peninsula. Today we'll continue this ramble into the Indian past of many centuries ago, with a look at a delicate matter to start.

Presumably the multi-family occupants of the big cedar-plank houses buried by a sliding hill of blue clay were trapped within their abodes. But there's a severe lack of mention of human relicts among the 54,000 artifacts so far exhumed at Ozette.

The friendly young scientists whom we found setting up for another season at the dig warned us that the matter of human remains was not open to discussion. The Makah Indian band whose village this was controls all aspects of the operation. One of the terms laid down was that there should be no publicizing of certain aspects of the work.

So, projecting, we can conclude that the long-buried ancestors of the Makah clan have been turned up along with their superbly-crafted possessions, and dealt with respectfully by their descendants.

We do know that the big slide — the last and greatest of successive land slippages — dropped so suddenly on the village that it became a wilderness Pompeii. Pathetic sidelight: the body of a mother dog, found with her pups snuggled up and nursing.

Peg-legging in over the 3½ miles of cedar boardwalk, I had built up a grandiose picture of an Indian Atlantis. But Ozette, finally arrived at, was at first sight disappointing.

There was the antic huddle of cedar-shake hutches built by the scientists to house themselves and their gear. Beyond, crooked in the elbow of a steep green hillside, were squares, rectangles and patches of dried mud. Everywhere writhed the fat polyethylene pipes through which sea-water is pumped to wash the artifacts free of the prisoning clay.

It is only when one realizes how far below slide-level the dig has been cut . . . sees the blackened sections of housewall soaking in their preservative glycol-solution vats . . . and views the specimen display of objects uncovered . . . that one realizes the extent of the find.

One of the scientists, an amiable young curly-head dressed haphazardly in rubber boots, stained khaki shirt and bib-front American gob dungarees, led us out to the dig. We teetered after him with finicky care; the whole site was precisely laid out with color-coded pegs and plank containing-walls. Our guide settled his back against a sunshiny rise of clay and, squatting on his heels, proceeded to expound.

The wonder of Ozette is that it tells the story, as does no other archeological find, of a complete community, prosperous, productive, long-settled and organized, which conducted its affairs totally unshadowed by white influence.

True, scraps of iron have been found, and a piece or two of bamboo which could only have drifted across the Pacific as flotsam from an Oriental junk. But no ships called on this wild coast in the years before that 15th- or 16th-century clay slide. It is assumed that the iron may have been traded from band to band up the coast from Spaniard-dominated Mexico.

Evidence that the people of Ozette were vigorous and successful whalers lies everywhere about. Ribs and massive vertebrae are heaped along the walks. Our guide explained to us that the houses actually had drainage systems of arched whale ribs laid beneath them.

While we listened to the account of a vanished people, gulls planed and drifted on the gentle sea breeze. An occasional fountain of surf rose from the jagged reefs that guard the off-shore.

All was as it had been on Ozette's last day in a June now many centuries distant.

There would have been whaling and sealing canoes on the beach then, of course, loaded with harpoons and sealskin floats and great coils of twisted cedar-bark rope.

There would have been a busy coming and going of people. Well-fed people. Well clad in the woven, soft-pounded inner bark of cedar, sleeping warm at night under blankets of mixed bark and wool from the little white dogs kept by the band's slaves on neighboring Ozette Island. They even had cushions, those Ozette people, of cedar bark stuffed with cat-tail fluff.

Their presence lingered everywhere about.

We hiked back to our cars over the wonderful wooden trail. Next day, at the Neah Bay museum raised by the Makahs, we viewed the recovered wealth of Ozette, and absorbed a rather startling lesson.

It didn't all start with the white man. Before ever he poked his nose into the Pacific Northwest, an ordered, vigorous culture existed on this coast. As proof thereof; we have only to consider Ozette.

Hospital land flurry worries Couvelier

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier said today he wants to "ring the bell" to prevent land speculation in Saanich near the site of the Helmcken Road hospital.

Couvelier said the construction start on the new hospital has already prompted a flurry of development applications on the other side of the View Royal-Saanich boundary, and he can see signs of similar pressures building up for development of nearby land in western rural Saanich.

He said the argument being heard in many quarters is that it is inevitable such land will have to be freed for development of medical-dental buildings and similar ancillary uses.

"Is it inevitable? If it isn't, how do we ring the bell so that everyone understands that corner of Saanich stays the way it is?"

The mayor raised the questions this morning at a meeting of Saanich council's policy and management committee.

Ald. John Mika suggested council ask the Capital Region Board to endorse a policy that no applications be considered to remove Agricultural Land Reserve designation from lands near the hospital.

"It (the hospital) was put in the centre of an ALR area," Mika noted. "If you insist on the ALR being maintained you isolate the problem and prevent it being spread."

But the mayor expressed doubt that such action by Saanich would be enough to kill the development threat that exists.

Municipal planner Gil Laurenson said despite rumors of certain individuals assembling land on the Saanich side of the boundary, there is no way that land could be serviced and developed if Saanich maintains its urban containment policy.

Municipal engineer Clifford Warren said the land near the hospital is "one of the worst areas we could ever consider providing services to," as far as cost is concerned.

Cannery charged

A sports fishing cannery has been charged with selling sports-caught salmon.

Federal fisheries officials allege that sports-caught salmon was being sold by the Brentwood Sports Fishing Cannery Ltd., 7054 Brentwood Road.

Under the federal Fisheries Act it is illegal to sell, trade or barter any salmon caught by sports methods.

The firm entered a not-guilty plea in provincial court this morning and the case was remanded to Oct. 30.

Brome residents return to homes

WEST BROME, Que. (UPC) — Trains were running again today along a section of CP Rail tracks were a truck driver was killed Thursday and thousands of gallons of flammable gas spilled from derailed tanker cars.

About 150 residents of West Brome, evacuated after the crash, returned to their homes Sunday as clean-up crews continued to siphon pollutants off the South Yamaska River.

A Brome Lake police spokesman said the villagers were returning home Sunday via a detour because a level crossing where the crash occurred was still under repair.

Guy Gagne, 34, was killed in the accident. He was the driver of a truck sitting at the crossing when a second truck, apparently out of control, careened down a steep hill and rammed Gagne's truck, knocking it into the passing Boston-bound freight train.

It's madness in the land of midnight sun

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — Golfing in the middle of the night in one huge sand trap infested with mosquitos isn't usually much of a drawing card up here.

But then, "midnight madness" isn't something you'd call usual.

Held along with several other events commemorating the longest day of the year, at least 108 golfers of varying abilities competed here Friday night in the annual midnight golf tournament.

The summer solstice is actually June 21, but Yellowknifers celebrated it a day later this year so they could continue throughout the weekend.

"We can golf at midnight because the sun goes down for just a few hours and comes back up again," said Ed Cook, tournament chairman. "If it's not overcast, there's perfect visibility."

But one has to wonder why anyone would even consider golfing in the Northwest Territories. Although most of the golfers were from the Yellowknife area, some came from Alberta and British Columbia specifically for the event.

"This golf course bears no resemblance to any other because it's all sand," Cook said. "There's no grass to speak of on this course.

"It's unique — it's something you can't do anywhere else."

Mosquitos are another feature of the course, but golfers were prepared.

"They've got every kind of spray, roll-on and cream imaginable out there. Some of them even have head nets."

Others — a minority — are fortified with alcohol.

"Some of them are feeling pretty damn good, particularly at midnight."

Back in Yellowknife, city streets were populated by an unusual number of shoppers and curiousity seekers.

Many stores and shops stayed open after midnight for shoppers, while bars coped with an unusual number of patrons.

CPU warns Mac-Blo over 'mercenaries'

MONTREAL (CP) — Pulp and paper manufacturers who try to keep a strike-bound mill running could face walkouts at their other operations, says the Canadian Paperworkers Union.

In an unprecedented special conference here Sunday, local presidents directed the executive of the 57,000-member union to meet with industry officials and seek guarantees they will not engage in strikebreaking.

The conference was arranged after union leaders claimed they had learned last month that MacMillan-Bloedel Ltd. was planning to fly supervisory personnel from British Columbia to reopen its MacMillan-Rothsay newsprint operation in St. John, N.B., where 525 CPU members have been on strike since April.

The union said MacMillan-Bloedel changed its mind when B.C. locals of the CPU and the International Woodworkers of America told the company negotiations covering mills on the west coast would be jeopardized by such a move.

Since the warning, industry-wide talks in B.C. for a contract to replace one which expires Friday have broken off.

The resolution passed Sunday warns that the CPU "can no longer guarantee that our collective agreements will be respected" if "Canadian pulp and paper manufacturers . . . operate any plant, mill or forest product operation where there is in progress a legal strike by members of the union."

It adds that the CPU executive should meet with industry leaders to demand "the firm and unequivocal commitment that under absolutely no circumstance will any of them run any operation where there is a legal strike by CPU members in progress."

CPU president L.H. Lorrain told the conference the use of "mercenaries" to run a legally-struck paper mill — often at considerable expense — has been seen recently in the United States.

Based on manufacturer's suggested retail prices of May 22, 1979. Honda price includes $500 deduction from manufacturer's previous suggested retail price. Local freight, pre-delivery inspection and local taxes extra. A dealer may sell for less.

Yesterday, we used to measure a car's fuel economy in the number of miles per gallon it got. Measured that way Hondas were incredibly economical. Today, they measure economy in the number of litres per hundred kilometers. The Civic Sedan uses 7.1 litres per 100 km. or 39 MPG* and the CVCC uses 6.2 litres per 100 km., or 45 MPG.* Measured this way, Hondas are still incredibly economical. And either way, they do it on regular gas.

Whether you look at the mileage the old way or the new way, there's only one way to look at this summer's Civic prices. They're new. Right now the manufacturer's previous suggested list price has been reduced by $500 on a Civic Sedan or CVCC and $400 on a Civic Hatchback or Station Wagon. And they still come with almost everything on. Front wheel drive, independent suspension, tinted windows, reclining bucket seats, carpeting and much more are all still on. And all still standard. So this summer, if you're looking for something new, look at the new Civic prices at your Honda dealer, now.

These estimates do, however, provide a useful comparison guide for new car models.

Fluoride pledge reactions range a wide gamut

CORNWALL ISLAND, Ont. (CP) — Mohawk Indians have expressed guarded optimism, anger and cynicism at Health Minister David Crombie's announcement that a full inquiry into fluoride, mercury and other toxic pollutants will be carried out in the Cornwall area.

Chief Lawrence Francis, who Friday conducted Crombie on a tour of the fluoride-stricken island that straddles Ontario, Quebec and New York State said: "It's a major victory after two years of knocking our heads against a wall.

"But we still have a long way to go."

Crombie told reporters that he and St. Regis Indian band leaders had agreed to terms for a comprehensive study, something that had eluded federal health department officials for two years.

He also agreed to three major changes in proposals made by department officials.

These are: dropping a demand for unilateral cancellation of the study once it has started, agreeing those involved in the study be acceptable to both the Indians and Crombie, involving Indians on the island reserve in any major discussions with the United States and when the final study recommendations are implemented.

A National Indian Brotherhood spokesman said: "It says a lot about the politics of these things if Crombie can come down here and do in several hours what his bureaucrats couldn't do in two years."

"What angers me is that health department officials have frittered away two years because of their political concerns," he said. "Crombie really had no choice but to agree with our position because we were right."

Reynolds Metals Co. of Massena, N.Y., and the Aluminum Co. of America (ALCOA), pump more than a ton of fluoride a day into the St. Lawrence River.

Francis says other large companies such as General Motors, Domtar and Canadian Industries Limited pollute the area with a variety of chemicals.

The issue flared when environmentalists and health officials fingered two U.S. aluminum smelters as the source of fluoride pollution that has killed cattle, vegetation and has impaired Indian health.

Recent studies by pathologist Lennart Krooks of Cornell University and Drs. Bertram Carnow and Shirley Conibear of Chicago noted that fluoride was responsible for the reduction of reserve cattle to 177 from 364 in the last 20 years.

More than 25 million pounds of fluoride has passed over or fallen on the island, located directly in the path of prevailing winds that blow the chemical onto the island reserve from the Reynolds plant.

Emissions from the plant comply with U.S. standards which are considerably higher than those in Ontario.

The St. Regis Mohawks have seen their community, which thrived since 1752 on a barter system made possible by abundant crops, cattle and fish, destroyed in two decades.

The Mohawks have complained about pollution for years but only after the Carnow-Conibear report was issued two years ago did the federal health department hustle to get involved, biologist Henry Lickers said.

Lickers is head of the St. Regis environment research division, an Indian agency which monitors air and water pollution on the island.

Public dog killing termed hasty

LANGLEY (CP) — A Langley RCMP officer who killed a dog in front of students at a local junior secondary school should have moved the students from the scene before shooting the animal, according to vice-principal Dan Peebles.

Constable Bob Laporte may have been "a little hasty" in shooting the dog, Peebles said.

The RCMP was called to the school last Tuesday after school officials and dog pound workers made several unsuccessful attempts to remove the German shepherd, which had been on the grounds for two days and had apparently attempted to bite a delivery man.

However, when Laporte arrived at the school he was not told that veterinarian Dr. Albert Anderson, at the school on other business, had already fed the dog a tranquilizer.

Anderson later criticized the pound workers for not being properly trained in how to catch stray dogs.

Langley RCMP Sgt. Hank Jansen said Laporte did what he thought was best and "my file is closed on the matter."

Cookies, coffee build a pipeline

CALGARY (CP) — Construction of the Alaska Highway natural gas pipeline will require 310,000 cookies, 40,000 napkins and 21,000 cups of coffee a week for every 500-man work crew, says an executive of an Edmonton-based catering firm.

That's in addition to the weekly order of meat, vegetables, dairy supplies and canned products that would total 14 tons and include 500 loaves of bread and 105 gallons of milk.

Ron Robinson, vice-president of Fortier and Associates Ltd., told an industry briefing that providing food and other services for the huge pipeline project will be a complicated task.

"We don't build pipelines, but our job is to ensure that the facilities are there to keep the morale of the crews high and get the job done."

It would take a crew of 84 to cater to a 500-man camp and $335,000 to provide it with kitchen equipment.

It is conceivable that four such camps could be operating at one time, he said.

BASEBALL'S SOAP OPERA CONTINUES... ...WITH REGGIE JACKSON ON WAIVERS

What will morrow bring to Yankees?

NEW YORK (AP) — It has taken less than a week for New York Yankees to once again become a real-live soap opera, something approximating the so-called Bronx Zoo that existed from Reggie Jackson's arrival in 1977 to Billy Martin's departure last July.

Martin, cowboy boots and all, is back in the saddle, having replaced Bob Lemon — the man who replaced him. With the Yankees, it couldn't be any other way: already the World Series baseball champions are cloaked in controversy.

—Are the Yankees trying to trade Reggie?

—Has Reggie asked to be traded?

—Can Reggie and Billy ever coexist?

—Is George riding to the rescue?

—Will the morrow bring the final parting, peace at last or just one more in the never-ending series of events that would make the most turbulent soap opera seem dull by comparison?

Taking the questions in order, the answers are maybe, maybe, maybe, maybe and stay tuned.

Both Jackson and Yankee officials declined to comment Sunday on reports that the sidelined slugger has asked to be traded. And general manager Cedric Tallis said that "no players have been mentioned in any trades at this point."

Meanwhile, Martin continued to make it a point to praise Jackson, saying the Yankees "need Reggie's bat because Reggie's a great player."

But Jackson, obviously choosing his words carefully, seemed down in the dumps.

Asked if he would trade himself if he were general manager, Jackson said, "With all the unrest and discomfort, I would have to analyze what's best for the club. Does that get me off the hook?"

The Yankees did confirm that Jackson's name, along with six others, appeared on the American League waiver list last Tuesday. That was the day Martin returned from 11 months in exile to resume the managerial position he vacated almost a year ago after calling Jackson "a born liar" and owner George Steinbrenner "convicted" for illegal campaign contributions.

The Associated Press learned the other Yankees on whom waivers were asked were centre fielder Mickey Rivers, veteran pitchers Catfish Hunter and Jim Kaat, long-time outfielder Roy White, utility infielder Fred Stanley and rookie outfielder Darryl Jones.

However, both Tallis and club president Al Rosen said the waiver request was a "routine" baseball maneuver.

The waiver period on the seven Yankees expired at 2 p.m. EDT today and the club then has 48 hours to withdraw the name of any player who is claimed or send him to the claiming team for the $20,000 waiver price.

Martin said he was "not out to hurt Reggie Jackson in any way. I have no animosity toward the guy. I can hardly wait until he comes back so I can use his bat. I think Reggie likes me and I know I like him. There's not a person in the world I hate. There's no hate in my heart. There's no tension on my part."

Someone wanted to know if Jackson thought it odd that he was placed on waivers — no matter how routine — while Martin was saying again and again how important he is to the team.

"That's a good question," he said, answering the question without really answering it.

Asked if he wants out of New York, Jackson replied: "New York's been good to me. I've enjoyed it here. It's taught me a hell of a lot."

Although the June 15 trading deadline has passed, there are ways to work out a deal involving Jackson, if the club so desires.

Jackson was to remain behind this week while the Yankees go to Toronto before returning home on Friday. The club explained he would be better off taking private batting practice and doing his running in New York rather than risk further injury to his leg on Toronto's artificial surface.

Steinbrenner, who arrived at Yankee Stadium during the latter stages of Sunday's game with Cleveland, was unavailable for comment. But he was expected at his ballpark office today and it was a good bet that he and Jackson would get together for a heavy rap session.

Coetzee power crushes Spinks

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Gerrie Coetzee, a 24-year-old South African who prayed for help with his punches, has won a shot at a share of the world heavyweight title by flooring Leon Spinks three times in two minutes and three seconds of the first round.

Spinks, 25, a product of the St. Louis ghetto and former world and Olympic champion, answered the opening bell Sunday night with a furious barrage of punches and then wound up bouncing on the canvas, the victim of a vicious right-hand attack.

A series of overhand rights by the South African surprised and stunned Spinks as he was still trying to show he was unaffected and unfrightened by his opponent's hammer-like punches.

"I asked the Lord to help me in this fight, and I want to thank him," Coetzee said. "I must tell the people the Lord answered my prayers."

Spinks' defeat by a first-round technical knockout could mean a long period of inactivity and little money. But Coetzee's convincing win made him the fourth South African fighter to get a world championship fight and, possibly, the first ever to gain a heavyweight title.

Coetzee will fight John Tate of the United States in September for the World Boxing Association crown expected to be abandoned by Muhammad Ali. The fight will probably be in South Africa, according to promoter Bob Arum.

Tate, who came here to see who his next opponent would be, said he was unimpressed by the South African blitz.

However, he was one of the few not impressed by the awesome power of Coetzee, who got a big lift from reports that the championship fight could be staged in South Africa before a crowd of 100,000 and a purse certainly higher than the $105,000 he won in Monte Carlo.

After the fight, Spinks went to his corner and started crying. He locked himself in his dressing room and refused any interviews. Leaving the dressing room, he declined to answer any questions, saying only: "I got beaten. What else can I say."

Coetzee, little-known internationally because he fought all his previous bouts at home, remained a mystery because of his short performance here. He has 15 knockouts in 22 professional fights, all victories.

Coetzee also looked somewhat dispasssionate in the dressing room while 500 South Africans, who had chanted the national anthem before the fight, went crazy over his victory.

"I am now thinking of Tate," Coetzee said. "It would be another difficult engagement. I will train hard as usual and again will pray to the Lord to help me."

South African organizers will be praying themselves, hoping the Top Rank organization accepts their bid to stage the Coetzee-Tate title fight in Johannesburg.

Physiotherapist smoothed Trevino's march to victory

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Lee Trevino has two lingering thoughts about the Canadian Open golf championship — Glen Abbey and Frank Farrell.

"It's a super-tough course," the Super Mex from Dallas said Sunday after winning the second of his three Canadian Open titles at Glen Abbey, a torcherous 7,059-yard layout that played to par 71.

"Glen Abbey is like the other Jack Nicklaus course in Muirfield (Ohio)," said Trevino. "It is really difficult. There aren't too many birdie holes out there, but there sure are a lot of bogeys and double bogeys."

Trevino turned in a conservative score — par 71 — to nail down his second Canadian title since the championship was moved here in 1977.

That gave him a 72-hole score of 281, three under par and three shots in front of playing partner Ben Crenshaw, who also shot a 71 in the hunt for the $63,000 winner's purse and the Peter Jackson Trophy.

Tournament favorite Tom Watson, the leading money-winner on the tour this year and the leader here Friday and Saturday, game to grief with a triple bogey six on the third hole Sunday and never recovered.

Watson, vying to become the first golfer to win more than $400,000 in a single season, added six bogeys and only one birdie to finish at 78 — seven over par.

His $23,800 in prize money bumped his season's take to $387,624 and left him $12,000 shy of the target he would have reached with second-place money, $37,800.

Watson's blowup started the day with a three-shot lead over Trevino but gave them back on the third hole. He put his tee shot into the water, flubbed his shot from the drop area into deep rough on the side of the green and dropped back into a tie with Trevino.

He continued to flirt with the lead until he ran into a string of bogeys in the valley holes — Nos. 12 - 14 — and finished with bogeys on both 17 and 18.

Trevino's cheque jumped his season's winnings to $175,117 and moved him over the $2 million mark in career money to $2,024,563.

Trevino then mentioned Farrell: "a guy that rubs us down every morning."

Farrell, a London, Ont., physiotherapist, takes a week off his holidays each year to tend to the golfers.

Farrell worked on Trevino's bad back in 1977 and the 39-year-old golfer responded with his first tour win in three years.

"I didn't have him work on me last year and I lost," said Trevino, who finished in a third-place tie in 1978 behind winner Bruce Lietzke. "I used him again this year and won. I just might take him with me."

Jim Nelford, the 23-year-old tour sophomore from Burnaby, was the top Canadian, finishing with a 72 and a 288 score, good for eighth place and $10,850, which raised his season's winnings to $36,187.

Nelford, unaccustomed to the applause of a large gallery that followed him most of the day, said he didn't feel any added pressure.

"Now I know what Arnold Palmer feels like," said the two-time Canadian amateur champion, alluding to the 49-year-old veteran who is beseiged by crowds.

The only other Canadian to survive the cut, Gar Hamilton of Toronto, finished with a 77 and 295.

BRIEFLY: An anxious fan dove into the lake that borders the 18th green and swam across to greet Lee Trevino as the champion walked onto the green . . . He shook hands with the golfer before being escorted off by three policemen . . . Nelford's eighth-place finish was the best by a Canadian since George Knudson tied for sixth in the 1972 Open.

SUPER SHOT from sand trap is played Sunday by "Super Mex" Lee Trevino on fifth hole during final round of Canadian Open golf championship. Trevino came from behind to win third Canadian crown by three strokes. (CP photo)

Mussels finally rebound but distress signals out

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Victoria Mussels finally won a baseball game Sunday but it may have come too late to save some of the hands on a ship that is listing badly.

Despite a 4-3 victory over Bellingham Mariners at Royal Athletic Park, owners Lynn and Jim Chapman aren't prepared to wait for the existing crew to bail out the Northwest League franchise. The distress flares have gone up in the direction of the Los Angeles Dodgers, San Diego Padres and Seattle Mariners.

The Chapmans aren't pressing the alarm button any too soon. Mussels, 2-4 on the young season, are third in the northern division standings behind a pitching staff that has yielded 46 runs in six games.

And there were only 146 paid customers in the park Sunday, which was to be expected in view of the fiasco the night before.

In that one, Victoria threw a 6-0 first-inning lead and a pair of early home runs by outfielder Pete Rabassa overboard and was scuttled 18-11 by Bellingham.

"We're phoning the Dodgers and the Padres," Jim Chapman said, "and Bellingham (a Seattle Mariner farm club with 33 hopefuls on the roster) may be willing to send us a couple of players.

"Van Schley (who is handling Mussels' payroll this year) is trying to get hold of a ballplayer in California. I'm not even sure of his name but Van says he's a proven player who has batted over .300 in a couple of leagues."

Mussels are also looking at righthander Randy Holt of Vancouver as a possible pitching addition.

"Van said that Grays Harbor (with whom he was connected last year) started like this," Chapman continued. "You can't panic early, but you've got to look at the number of fans in the seats. Now we're going to have to do something like win 10 in a row to get them back."

Mussel manager Bill Bryk, meanwhile, has slapped fines on several players for lackadaisical efforts in Friday night's 8-3 loss to Bellingham and Saturday's mess.

Sunday's contest was in complete contrast, thanks chiefly to steady pitching by starter Mario Avallone, who evened his record at 1-1 with relief help in the eighth and ninth from Roy Moretti.

Timely hitting by outfielder Jim Burton helped, too. Burton drove in three of Mussels' tallies with a two-run triple in the third and a sacrifice fly in the seventh.

Rabassa contributed a circus catch in left in the sixth and infielders Steve Young, Danny Purpura and Emil Drzayich turned two double plays, including a game-ender.

Nick Kintz, who singled to lead off the eighth, plated what turned out to be the winning run on a throwing error and passed ball.

Avallone lasted 7⅓ innings, yielding two runs on seven hits, walking two and striking out six. Moretti got the save, allowing a hit and a walk, both in the ninth.

Mussels continue with a three-game home stand starting tonight at 7:30 against Walla Walla Padres with lefthander Steve Hartery scheduled to pitch.

The series continues with games Tuesday at 1:30 p.m. in conjunction with a minor baseball clinic and Wednesday at 7:30.

Nanaimo drops in deeper hole

NANAIMO — Excellent goaltending and checking kept scores to single figures Saturday as Coquitlam Adanacs edged Nanaimo 9-6 to drop the Timbermen deeper in the Western Lacrosse Association cellar.

Victory enabled Adanacs to close to within one point of the leading New Westminster Salmonbellies.

Coquitlam's Greg Thomas made 44 saves while Mac Maude came up with 39 at the other end of the floor.

Adanacs led 2-1 after the first period and 6-4 after 40 minutes.

Brian Evans was the game's top scorer, counting four goals for the Timbermen. Mike Walsh and Ron Sage also scored for Nanaimo.

Dave Durante counted twice for Coquitlam while singles went to Mark Valastin, Matt Aiken, Dave Cochrane, Randy Delmonico, Wayne McAuley, Gord Quilty and Mark Tuura.

Kicker trips Esks

EDMONTON (CP) — Gerry Organ kicked a pair of 22-yard field goals in the final minute to overshadow a strong second-half effort by Edmonton Eskimo quarterback Warren Moon and give Ottawa Roughriders a 30-27 victory in a Canadian Football League exhibition Sunday.

The Eskimos trailed 21-1 at halftime but dominated the second half as Moon threw three touchdown passes and led the defending Grey Cup champions to 26 points and a 27-34 lead going into the last minute.

But as many of the 41,379 spectators began to file out of Commonwealth Stadium, Ottawa struck back. A 33-yard pass from Jimmy Jones to Cornell Barlow put Ottawa on the Edmonton 41-yard line and four plays later Organ tied the score.

Then a Moon pass deflected off a receiver's hands and Ottawa defensive back Doug Falconer intercepted it and ran 33 yards to the Eskimo 22. Seconds later, on the final play of the game, Organ kicked the winning points.

Salmonbellies down Burnaby

Rob Dalzell scored three goals to lead New Westminster Salmonbellies to a 15-12 victory over Burnaby Cablevision in a Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League game at Burnaby Sunday.

Ross Gatensbury, Brian Cowie and Dan MacIsaac each scored two goals for Westminster. Burnaby got three from Gary Purdon.

In a game played at Richmond on Saturday, the Roadrunners scored the only three goals in overtime to beat Coquitlam Adanacs 16-13.

Versatility ignored

Houston pitcher Joaquin Andujar is happy but would appreciate more recognition.

Andujar won his fourth game in five starts Sunday, scattering seven hits and benefitting from the clutch hitting of Alan Ashby and Denny Walling as the Astros downed San Diego Padres 4-1 in National League baseball action.

Andujar is happy any time he's pitching, whether it's in relief or as a starter. However, he feels his versatility has gone unnoticed by the media.

The emotional Dominican was so angry recently he took a shower with his uniform on to avoid talking to reporters.

"As long as the team wins, I don't care, he said. "But I am mad because nobody realizes the job I have done. I don't want publicity. I just want people to realize what I've been doing.

"I've done a good job in short relief, in long relief and as a starter. That's very hard to do."

Elsewhere Sunday, Philadelphia Phillies beat Montreal Expos 5-2, New York Mets defeated St. Louis Cardinals 6-2, Cincinnati Reds trimmed San Francisco Giants 8-7, Chicago Cubs blanked Pittsburgh Pirates 5-0 and Atlanta Braves defeated Los Angeles Dodgers 4-2.

The Phillies broke an eight-game National League losing streak against the Expos behind the hitting and pitching of Larry Christenson.

The Philadelphia right-hander hit a pair of doubles and his ninth career home run while yielding two runs on eight hits over six innings. Tug McGraw finished up for the Phillies, gaining his fifth save.

American girls, Burnaby boys and smiles from the losers

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

Just like A B C. That's the way it was Sunday when the very successful 26th annual Y-Times track and field meet wound up in glorious weather at UVic's Centennial Stadium.

American girls and Burnaby boys set the pace for the whole weekend and when it came to dishing out the trophies they proved to be the cream of nearly 1,000 athletes competing.

And where did the C come in? Well, that's for Coquitlam Cheetahs who, thanks to an extremely strong showing by their boys' contingent, finished second overall.

But the spotlight belonged to a powerful team of mainly black athletes from Tacoma, who carried off a large share of the trophies, to another squad from Seattle which took the women's team title and to those boys from Burnaby.

Chalking up 358 points over the two days, they earned the boys' team trophy and guided Burnaby Striders to top spot overall (their girls scored 237) with a combined team total of 595.

Second place went to the Cheetahs with 433. Victoria Track Club, scoring well on some late field events and in the relays, improved from sixth to overtake both South Fraser and the Victoria Flying Y (co-hosts of the meet with the Victoria Times) to hold down third spot with 354. South Fraser had 346 and the Y was fifth with 337.

Burnaby Striders' 237 wasn't enough to win the girls' team trophy as well. It went once again to the strong Eastside Track Club of Seattle. And meet director Jack Carson, who was delighted with the way "the smoothest-running Y-Times meet yet" went, wasn't the least bit surprised at the American girls' showing.

"Eastside won this trophy last year and, in fact, have done every year for as long as I can remember," he said after the awards were handed out by veteran Canadian track and swimming coach Archie McKinnon.

It was a big improvement, though, this time out for the Burnaby boys who finished second last year behind the Flying Y.

Ericka Harris of Tacoma Pacers and Dave McKeenman of Coquitlam Cheetahs were the big individual winners.

Sprinting almost effortlessly, Ericka swept the field in the 14 and 15-year-old girls' division, winning the 100 metres in 12 seconds flat, setting a new B.C. record in the 200 with a time of 24.4 (which bettered Stephanie Berto's old mark that had stood for many years), and winning the 400 metres in 55.8, only a shade outside Bev Cox's record of 55.3.

And, to cap off a brilliant weekend before taking home both the girls' track award and the award for best overall performance at the meet by a woman, Ericka anchored her all-black relay team to the most decisive victory of the day.

Her teammate Cookie Staples won the girls' throwing award, placing first in the javelin with 39.22 metres, first in the discus with 31.22 and first in the shotput with a heave of 13.67.

Pat Wellmann of the Flying Y was one of two Victoria trophy winners and she came very close indeed to taking the girls' overall best athlete award away from the incredible Ericka Harris.

With a leap of 1.69 metres, the 15-year-old Pat, who goes to Cedar Hill Junior High School, set a new B.C. midget record in winning the high jump and she carried off the girls' jumping trophy.

But Pat also won the 800 metres in 2 minutes 15.5 seconds, won the 1,500 metres in 4:36.0 and finished second in the 400 metres in 58.2. It was another tremendous display of versatility and the selection committee made up of Stan Pelland of the Victoria Track Club, Doug Garriock of Duncan CeeVacs and Scott Glaspie of Powell River anguished somewhat before awarding the trophy to the Tacoma girl.

McKeenman of the Cheetahs completely dominated the three events to carry off the boys' throwing trophy. He set a B.C. record with his winning toss of 15.76 in the shotput, placed first in the discus with 38.58 and won the javelin as well with a throw of 58.52 to make him the meet's outstanding male athlete.

The boys' jumping trophy went to Scott Dore of Richmond Kajaks. Just turned 13 a week ago, Scott who stands 5 feet 9 inches cleared 1.70 metres (that's 5 feet 7 for you unconverted) to win the high jump and set a B.C. native and open record in his age class.

Ken Wilmhurst of Victoria Mercuries Track Club was the other Vancouver Islander to win a trophy. He took the award for best performance by a male in track events after winning the 800 metres in 2:10.9 and then setting a record in the 12 and 13-year-old class with his winning time of 4:25 in the 1,500 metres.

But those were only the highlights. There were many other fine performances on both days. Like the overwhelming win by Victoria Mercuries' Terry Bateman Sunday in the 1,500-metre steeplechase. He ran confidently and led from start to finish to make up for his recent third-place finish in the B.C. High Schools track championships in Burnaby.

There were hundreds more. Hundreds who gave it their best shot and, no matter where they finished, enjoyed it and learned from it.

The picture framed in my memory of the 26th annual Y-Times meet was that of a youngster, 14 or 15 I guess, coming down the home stretch in the 800-metre event in fifth place . . . and beaming with an ear-to-ear grin!

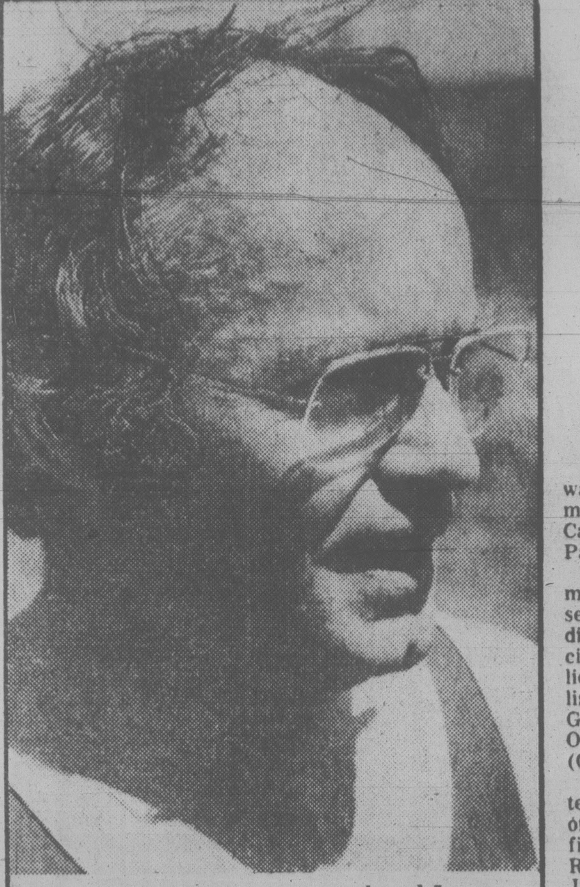
Shouting out lap times is track official Jack Carson



Dr. Stuart Cameron . . . once chased Jerome

Flying doctor tries again

By Max Low
Times Staff

Dr. Stuart Cameron hasn't quite made up his mind after his "second debut" Sunday whether or not to leave it another 19 years before running his next 200-metre dash.

Now 42 and a neurosurgeon in Victoria, Dr. Cameron ran for Canada in the British Empire Games (as they were called back then) in 1958 in Cardiff, Wales. He did well in the 100 and 200 metres and in the relay.

"Our relay team finished fourth and I made the semi-finals in both the 100 and 200," he said at Centennial Stadium Sunday.

Talked into it by his 14-year-old son Bobby, who has recently become interested in track and field, the flying doctor ripped round the 200-metre curve to finish third in the Masters' event (40 years and over) in the 26th annual Y-Times meet.

"That was the first time I've sprinted the 200 in 19 years," he puffed. "I hung up my spikes in 1960 when Harry Jerome was at his peak. I was getting to the stage where I was watching Harry run from behind.

"I was in that race in 1960 when Jerome set the world record of 10 seconds flat for the 100 metres in Olympic trials in Saskatoon. I didn't run too well, though, and didn't make the team that time."

If the others didn't prove quite as adventurous, Stuart Cameron did have a bit of ex-Empire Games calibre company at the Y-Times event.

Doing a spot of officiating was Terry Tobacco, who competed for Canada in the 1954 Games in Vancouver where he won the bronze medal in the 400 metres. Terry, father of rising track star Judy Tobacco, still holds the old 440 yards record for B.C. and officials say if it was converted to metres it would be the fastest 400 on record, too.

Rafe Duke, one of the original starters at the first Y-Times meet 26 years ago, had good intentions.

At 48 Rafe is still one of Canada's fastest Masters sprinters who can zip home in the 100 in 11.7 and he had planned to run in both the 100 and 200.

On Thursday night, however, in his very last bit of training for the meet, Rafe pulled a calf muscle and had to be content with a role of starter for the weekend.

And so, as far as the former famous showing the youngsters how it's done was concerned, it was all left up to Stuart Cameron.

"I hope there won't be too much about this in the paper," he said with a grin. "I just did it for laughs.

CONFUSION MARKS TRIALS AT VANCOUVER

52 named to Pan-Am team

Athletes unhappy; team selected before trials

By GRANT KERR

VANCOUVER (CP) — It was a confusing weekend for most of the runners at the Canadian track trials for the Pan-American Games.

The Saturday meet was more a competition than a selection because the Canadian Track and Field Association had been forced earlier in the week to submit its list of names for the Pan-Am Games to the Canadian Olympic Association (COA).

The COA said it needed the team list by June 19 because of pressure from Games officials in San Juan, Puerto Rico, site of the 1979 Games, July 1-15.

Many runners were frustrated by the situation because they knew that a win at the track trials here didn't necessarily mean a berth on the Canadian team.

"It was hard to get excited about running here because no one really knew what was going on," said Geri Fitch of Toronto, winner of the women's 3,000 metres Sunday. "Most of us were here just for the chance to run, that's all."

Gerard Mach of Ottawa, national program director for the track and field association, watched the 14 events during the two-day meet and was to meet with COA officials Sunday in Toronto to suggest any last-minute changes to the Canadian team which he felt were necessary.

Mach admitted that the Canadian team was virtually set before the track trials, based on performances during the last 12 months.

"We need more competitions like this so we can see what development is happening in track and field," said Mach, who also is the Canadian track and field coach for the Pan-Am Games.

"As a group, we have some medal prospects, especially in the field events. The runners also have some chances."

Mach praised sprinters Angela Taylor and Desai Williams of Toronto after they completed a sprint double Saturday by winning their respective 200-metre races.

He also had kind words for 800-metre runner Doug Wournell of Calgary who managed to win despite nearly falling after catching his foot on a pipe railing on the inside of the track.

Fitch said she and many other runners were tired after campaigning recently in Europe. She cited her own time of 9:47.5 in the 3,000, noting that she had run a 9:09 two weeks ago in Italy.

"I was the only one in the race who had made the Pan-Am Games standard of 9:23.-" she said. "I found it hard to get excited about the race under those conditions."

SLIM CHANCE FOR WILLERS

Muscular Scott Neilson solidified his ranking as Canada's top hammer-thrower and Harold Willers remained No. 2 but only one was guaranteed a trip to Puerto Rico after Saturday's special Pan-American Games selection trial at Centennial Stadium.

Neilson, a New Westminster native who is considered a good bet for the gold medal in the hammer, and Willers, a Claremont high grad, easily outdistanced the four-man field seeking selection to the Games team.

Neilson, who won Saturday's throwoff with a respectable heave of 67.88 metres, was named to the team Sunday.

The 53-member team was announced in Toronto but a provisional list keeps the door open for possible admission to Willers. Names of six athletes were submitted to Canadian Olympic Association for possible inclusion. The six were not named publicly.

But Willers, second in Saturday's competition with a toss of 60.24 metres, may have cause to be hopeful. He recent performances indicate the Victorian would have no trouble finishing among the top six at the Pan-Am Games. Willers' personal best is 62.24.

Neilson was well off his best, 72.24.

Fred Sommers of Vancouver finished third with a throw of 54.98 while Montreal's Charles Lafontaine was a disappointing fourth with 53.94. Lafontaine won the gold medal in the 1977 Canada Games while the 20-year-old Willers finished third.

TORONTO (CP) — A team of 52 — 19 women and 33 men — was named by the Canadian Track and Field Association Sunday to represent Canada at the Pan American Games in San Juan, Puerto Rico, next month.

A CFTA spokesman said the team is subject to confirmation by the Canadian Olympic Association and the Games organizing committee and that a supplementary list of six additional athletes has been submitted for possible inclusion. The names of the six were not announced.

The spokesman said selections were based on achievement of standards set by the COA or potential to place in the top six in an event. The team includes contestants in 36 of the 39 track and field events at the Games.

No Victorians were announced as having been selected.

Seaboard sidetracked

Elks-Athletics received a helping hand Saturday from Tally-Ho to capture the District I berth in the British Columbia senior "B" men's softball championships.

Tally-Ho upset Seaboard Construction, the defending Western Canada champions, 4-3 and gave Elks-Athletics first place in the three-team, double round-robin tournament.

Elks-Athletics, who will compete in the provincial final July 11-15 in Vancouver, had taken the tournament lead by beating Tally-Ho 7-3 in the first game Saturday at Central Park.

Elks finished with a 3-1 record, Seaboard was 2-2 and Tally-Ho, 1-3.

Barry McLachlan, who had three hits in three trips to the plate, gave Tally-Ho a 3-0 lead in the first inning by following singles by Jay Tuson and Paul Kraeling with a home run.

Tom Robertson scored for Seaboard after doubling in the fourth inning but Tally-Ho regained the margin in the sixth when Kevin Gilbert singled and scored on a single by Kraeling.

Seaboard rallied in the seventh when pinch-hitter Barry Wilkin led off with a walk and Wayne Forland singled with one out. Glen Kildufff then drew a walk and Paul Morrison hit a two-run single.

But that's as far as they got.

Winning-pitcher John Barnes bore down and struck out Robertson before getting Rick Krawetz on a groundout and ending the game.

Bob Wilson set the pace for the Elks-Athletics in an 11-hit barrage against Tally-Ho with two singles and a home run.

Tim Galavan added a single and a homer while Wally Poppoff and Chris Carolan each hit a pair of singles.

Ray Beveridge pitched a five-hitter for the victory.

Elks-Athletics continued their winning ways in Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League action Sunday, beating Port Angeles Telecable 2-0 and 10-3 in action at Central Park.

In the other game, Labatts defeated Juan de Fuca Builders, 3-1.

Ken Fox struck out 13 batters and allowed only two hits and one base on balls while pitching the 2-0 Elks win.

Power-hitting gave Elks-Athletics the second win.

Bob Bugslag sparked the 13-hit attack with a two-run homer and a triple in four trips to the plate to score twice and drive in three runs.

Alf Hass was two-for-three, including a two run homer, to score once and drive in three while Bob Wilson also tagged a round-tripper.

Nichols shine

Top-seeded John and Pat Nichol defeated third-ranked John and Enid Jackson, 7-5, 6-1 Sunday to win the mixed doubles event in the annual Geritol tournament on the grass courts at the South Cowichan Tennis Club in Cowichan Bay.

The experienced husband-and-wife combination got past fourth-seeded Max Low and Jo-Ann Stone, 6-3, 7-6 in the semi-finals while the Jacksons reached the final by upsetting second-seeded Peter Wilson and Adrienne Cooper, 6-2, 6-2.

Twenty-two pairs participated in the tourament.

Remaining events in the popular Geritol tournament for veteran players will be staged next weekend.

Eskimo star ends career

EDMONTON (CP) — George McGowan, a wide receiver with the Canadian Football League Edmonton Eskimos since 1970, has decided to end his playing career.

During his career with the Eskimos, McGowan, 31, latched on to 424 passes — 19 fewer than former Calgary Stampeder Herman Harrison — to finish eighth overall on the league's career list for passes caught.

Stockers sweep weekend series

Stockers North Americans swept both doubleheaders in a weekend Vancouver Women's Softball League series against Vancouver Eldorado at Central Park.

Stockers won 1-0 and 11-2 Sunday after beating the visiting squad 8-7 in eight innings and 3-2 Saturday.

Liz Wood singled and then scored the winning run in the 1-0 game on a sacrifice by Lorna Lundeen. Sandy Ferguson had two hits in three trips to the plate for Stockers and Cathy Hawley pitched a four-hitter for the victory.

The final 11-2 game was ended after five innings. Colleen Johnson led an 11-hit barrage with a triple and a single in three trips to score twice and drive in two runs. Wood went two-for-four to score once and drive in two, Ferguson drove in two and scored once on a single and winning-pitcher Debbie Derkson, who hurled a four-hitter, went two-for-threee and drove in one run.

Derkson was credited for the pitching win in the 8-7 game Saturday and Hawley pitched the 3-2 decision.

Meanwhile, in Victoria Senior Women's League play Sunday at Hyacinth Park, VI 90 Vicettes moved into a tie for first place with Stockers, who have two games in hand, by recording victories over Butler Brothers (2-1) and Strathcona Stingers (11-1).

In other games, Karen Perkins pitched two victories for third-place Bemister's Welding, a 5-2 decision over Capital City Pirates and a 3-2 nod over Esquimalt Combos; Island Dryco Breakers tripped Stingers 13-9; and Butlers defeated Breakers, 12-5.

Nancy McLachlan hurled a two-hitter for the Vicettes' win over Butlers and Dianne Daniels, who was two-for-three at the plate, singled in what turned out to be the winning run.

Sandy Milligan struck out seven batters while pitching a four-hitter in the VI 90 win over Stingers.

World mark for juniors

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Sandra Farmer, a high school senior from Brooklyn, N.Y., set a world record in the women's 400-metre hurdles Sunday in the United States Amateur Athletic Union junior track and field championships at Indiana University.

Farmer, the 1977 junior champion who was running in her second hurdle race this season, was timed in 58.31 seconds. That broke the world junior record of 58.61.

Budgets drop four to California squad

SANTA ROSA, Calif. — Strong pitching performances by Chuck D'Arcy and K.G. Fincher carried Santa Rosa, the third-ranked United States team, to a four-game sweep over Canada's Pan-American Games team from Victoria.

D'Arcy and Fincher held Canada, represented by Victoria Budgets, to three runs in 35 innings.

Santa Rosa scored 3-1 and 2-1 (in eight innings) Saturday and finished up by claiming 2-1 (in 13 innings) and 4-0 victories Sunday.

Victoria field manager Harvey Stevenson said Santa Rosa "undeniably is the best team we've faced this season but we still should have won a game or two. We left too many men on the bases because of poor executiion of fundamentals and gave away runs because of defensive mistakes."

The Canadians complete their pre-Games warmup with a series in Clearwater, Fla., Tuesday and Wednesday.

Dave Wilson, Rod Guenter (5) and Sonny Phillips; Chuck D'Arcy and Jim Marsh. Home run: Canada — Dennis Eckert.
Second game:

Goodwill skein getting better

Vancouver Island Goodwill Bottlers extended their unbeaten record to nine games and settled a couple of old scores with two victories over B.C. Intermediate "A" Lacrosse League rivals at the weekend in Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Bottlers boosted their record to 7-0-2 with a 17-12 triumph over Burnaby No. 1 Sunday after downing Coquitlam Adanacs 21-10 Saturday.

The two visiting teams were the only ones to tie Goodwill this season. Burnaby forced a 17-17 deadlock and Adanacs tied Bottlers 13-13 in previous Mainland encounters.

Gord Christiaens led Bottlers in the win over Burnaby with three goals while double tallies were added by John Crowther, Gordie Taylor, Will Reid and Mike Thomas. Singles were added by Vince Cullen, Jim Lightbody, Doug Barnes, Frank Wendt, Al Zozula and Shawn Dheensaw.

Burnaby marksmen were led by two-goal efforts from J. Burns, C. Collis and G. Van Beek.

Derek Croucher made 40 saves in the Goodwill net and D. Smith of Burnaby blocked 25 shots.

Wendt, Thomas and Crowther sparked the win over Adanacs with four goals each, Taylor added three, Lightbody chipped in two and singles were contributed by Barnes and Cullen.

Croucher and Herb Isherwood combined to make 51 saves for Bottlers while Al Crane and Kevin Jones stopped 56 shots for Coquitlam.

Lineman dies

NORTH BERGEN, N.J. (AP) — Troy Archer, defeinsive lineman with the New York Giants, was fatally injured in a weekend automobile accident near here.

Archer, a first-round draft choice by the National Football League team in 1976, died after the car in which he was riding struck a pole.

B.C. Games berth for young bowler

An 18-year-old from the Gordon Head club, Peter Day has become the youngest lawn bowler in the British Columbia Summer Games.

Day defeated Alf Gallagher of Victoria Lawn Bowling Club 18-11 in the singles final Saturday to complete the Vancouver Island (zone 6) lawn bowling lineup in the Aug. 3-4 Games at Richmond.

Previously-declared zone representatives are: pairs, Allan Jones and Lionel Nichols of Victoria; triples, Don Grieve, Gerry Hindle and Gord Coughtry of Nanaimo; and fours, George Konchak, Don Forbes, Ed Brown and Doug Boyle of Victoria West.

Elsewhere on the Victoria-area lawn bowling scene, Gene Fullard and Annie Fraser of Lake Hill defeated Joan Farnham and Olive Kay of Burnside to capture the Baker Trophy in a competition for women's pairs.

Vee Hewin and Sadie McArthur collected "B" honors with an 18-9 victory over Vic West's Hilda Douglas and Gladys Estensen.

Island vets take series

BURNABY — Peter Brett salvaged a tie with his second goal of the game in the last minute of play Saturday as Vancouver Island easily wrapped up a victory in the annual inter-city old-timers' soccer series against Vancouver.

With the 2-2 draw, the Islanders finished with an 8-3 margin in the home-and-home competition.

Jack Bell and Willy Whyte scored for the Vancouver veterans in Saturday's contest, which was deadlocked 1-1 at halftime.

Top tossers suffer as twin bill divided

Two of the Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League's top pitchers took it on their chins Sunday as the front-running Farmer Construction and Lumberworld marked time by splitting a Sunday doubleheader at Lambrick Park.

Terry Adams, with five straight victories, suffered his first loss as Lumberworld connected for a 10-4 victory.

Farmers restored their half-game grasp on first place by winning the second game 4-3 in 10 innings, dealing Mike Squire his first setback after six straight triumphs.

Rick Cook, boosting his pitching record to 5-3, had a no-hitter going until Farmers spoiled his bid with a pair of singles in the sixth. Farmers then broke the shutout spell by routing Cook wth six straight singles in the seventh.

Squire sparked Lumberworld's offense by going three-for-three while Dan van Gylswyk knocked in three runs.

Farmers won the nightcap in the third extra inning when Dan Towner singled with one out, moved to third on Glen Smith's double and then scored on Al Moir's infield hit.

Morris returns for fourth title and event record

Tom Morris came out of semi-retirement to claim a surprise victory in the combined Gary Lund Memorial and B.C. championship bicycle road race that started and finished Sunday at Centennial Park.

Morris, who had not competed for a year, set a new record for the 100-mile senior event with a time of four hours, 7 minutes, 31 seconds. It was the fourth provincial title for Morris, now riding for the Carleton Cycle Club of Victoria.

Eugene Rochfort of Vancouver came second in the senior category and Bernie Willock of Victoria Wheelers was third. Next in line were Joe Smythe and Dave Watkins of Vancouver and Dave McLellan of Wheelers.

Neil Davies of Vancouver won the 66-mile junior race in 2:48:40 and was followed by Alex Stieva, Brian Green and Kory Sinclair of Vancouver and Scott Clazie of Wheelers.

Jasonne Stevens finished first in the 33-mile women's category in 1:33:12.

Baz Lysett of Vancouver clocked a time of 1:55:23 while winning the 44-mile veterans' event. He was followed across the line by Art Evert and Elmar Bertilson of Vancouver and Dave Emery of Wheelers.

New Whitecap produces with penalty in overtime

Times News Services

Newly-acquired Alan Ball scored on a penalty kick with no time left in the second overtime period to give Vancouver Whitecaps a 2-1 win over California Surf in North American Soccer League action Sunday before 20,814 fans at Vancouver's Empire Stadium.

Ball's goal came after California was called for a hand ball by Paul Cahill with six seconds remaining. California goalkeeper Dave Jokerst stopped the first penalty kick but referee Art Walker ruled that he moved before Ball shot and ordered the try retaken.

It was Ball's first goal of the season and came just two days after he was purchased from Philadelphia Fury.

The referee was mobbed by California players following the goal and had to be escorted from the field by ushers.

Willie Johnston gave Vancouver a 1-0 lead at 17:02 of the first half when he chested down a pass from Ball and blasted a shot into the right corner.

California came back two minutes later to even the score when Steve David tapped in a loose ball after a scramble in the Whitecaps' goal area.

The win moved Vancouver back into first place in the National Conference West Division, with a record of 11 wins and five losses for 94 points, five more than Los Angeles Aztecs, 2-0 losers to Tulsa Roughnecks.

A pair of homebrews stole the show at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J., for league-champion New York Cosmos.

Ricky Davis, a 21-year-old from Denver, had the only goal, and David Brcic, a 22-year-old goalkeeper from St. Louis, earned the shutout in the Cosmos' 1-0 victory over New England Tea Men.

Fine weekend for Oak Bay

Oak Bay won the 20th annual Albion six-a-side cricket tournament for the second straight year Sunday at Beacon Hill and Windsor Parks.

Oak Bay tripped Albion 52-47 in the final while Alcos "A" defeated Albion "B" 43-42 in the consolation final.

A total of 18 teams took part in the competition consisting of 10-over games.

Brian Heaps of Albions emerged with the best individual record among batsmen with 101 aggregate, including 50, not out.

John Schofield of Alcos had 43, not out, and Eric Kjekstad of Incogs had 42, not out.

Jan Aten of Oak Bay topped the bowlers by taking three wickets for the loss of only six runs against Alcos "B".

Success in the 'six' event made it a great weekend for Oak Bay, which scored the only victory in Saturday's league matches and took over first place in the Victoria and District Cricket Association.

Oak Bay downed Cowichan by two wickets at Shawnigan Lake while Albion and Incogs drew at Beacon Hill Park and Saanich and Nanaimo battled to a draw at Prospect Lake.

Scores and leading batsmen and bowlers:

OAK BAY (114 for 8): Batting — Kortwright Richards 52; Bowling — Brian Tetlow 3 for 11, Eric Richards 4 for 26. COWICHAN (109, all out): Bowling — Ken Aziz 3 for 21.

INCOGS (211 for 4): Batting Eric Kiekstad 73, John Wenman 70; ALBION (112 for 4): Batting — John Callander 28 not out, Mal Shanks 26 not out; Bowling — Dave Gladders 2 for 33.

NANAIMO (203 for 8): Batting — David Irwin 73, David Shaw 58. SAANICH (134 for 5): Batting Graham Brew 37; Bowling — Brew 2 for 25.

Dominating Hornets collect fifth straight championship

Saanich Hornets added another chapter to their story of domination in the Vancouver Island Bantam Football League.

Hornets defeated Vampires 34-22 Sunday at Cedar Hill Park to collect their fifth straight championship and their ninth crown in 10 years.

League scoring-champ Gary Layton paced Hornets with two touchdowns while Doug Waldie, Paul Holin and Paddy Wyman each added one. Wyman, runner-up in the scoring race, also counted a two-point conversion, as did Ian Woodcock.

Gary Tyson, Kevin Farmer and Richard Taylor went over for Vampire majors while Ken Wilhelm notched a pair of two-point conversions.

Archers selected

Victorians captured three of four positions on the British Columbia women's team going to the archery competition in the Western Canada Games following weekend trials at Royal Oak School.

Wanda Allan, former Olympic team member, Geri Cosgrove, also experienced in international competition, and Gayle Cho, who has only been shooting one year, were selected to the team along with Marj Saunders of Maple Ridge.

Don Warren, a former Canadian champion, and John Brooks of Maple Ridge were joined by Dave Mann, an Olympic team member, and Phil Talbot of Richmond on the men's squad.

The archers selected are also expected to form the nucleus of teams for the Canadian outdoor championships.

World-record effort on Portland streets

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Joan Benoit set a women's world record for 15 kilometres (9.3 miles) Sunday with a clocking of 51 minutes 27.5 seconds clocking in the Cascade Run Off road race through downtown Portland.

Benoit's mark bettered the record of 51:37 set by Marty Cooksey in the 1978 Cascade Run Off.

Michigan school teacher Herb Lindsay took the men's competition with a time of 44:17, breaking away from Japan's Hiroshi Yuge in the final few hundred yards. Yuge finished in 44:28. Kirk Pfeffer of Boulder, Colo., was third in 44:43 and Gerrard Barrett of Australia, was fourth in 44:45.

A total of 4,892 competitors entered the race.

Benoit, a student at Bowdoin College in Brunswick, Me., finished almost two minutes ahead of second-place finisher Cathey Twomey of Minneapolis, Minn., in the women's competition.

THE NAME GAME
Rules and Procedures

Object of "The Name Game": To become eligible for prize drawings by matching letters of the alphabet, published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, with the letters in your name. Each game starts with a Saturday Times and ends in the Sunday Colonist two weeks later. The official entry form will be published every day. All members of a family may play. There is no age limit. You may enter more than once but only one entry per envelope may be submitted. As each game ends, you are invited to play the next game.

1. Using the official entry form or a reasonably hand-drawn facsimile (no mechanically reproduced forms accepted), start at the upper left hand corner and print your name continuously, one letter in each square, until all the squares are filled in. (For example, if your name is John Anderson, Sample 1 shows how to fill out your entry form.) Do not include punctuation.
Use your legal name, in a form which can be verified on your driver's licence, social security card or other official identification. You may use various forms of your first name (e.g. John, Jonathan or John S.), as long as your identity can be verified. No nicknames, please.
2. Letters for the Name Game will be published as follows: 4 letters Saturday and Sunday and 3 letters daily. When an official letter matches one in your diagram, circle it on your entry. That letter may appear in more than one square on your diagram, but you may circle only one such letter (of your choice) each time. Since individual letters are selected at random, they may appear more than once — even on the same day. You may circle one such letter as many times as that letter is published. The same letters will be published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist but may only be used once in any one entry.
3. When you match enough letters to complete one row on your diagram — horizontal, vertical or diagonal (corner to corner), as in Sample 2, you are eligible for the prize drawings for that game. Drawings for 15 prizes will be held every other week for 10 weeks. At each drawing $500 goes to the first name drawn, $100 to the next —, $50 each to the next 3, and $25 for the last 10 — (Winners must answer a time-limited skill-testing question before collecting prizes.) All names drawn will be returned to the drum for the grand prize drawing.
4. Mail your completed entry form to: The Name Game, Victoria Press, P.O. Box 1390, Victoria, B.C. V8W 3C4; postmarked no later than the Monday following the end of that game. Completed entries may also be delivered, in a sealed envelope, to Victoria Press, no later than Tuesday, the following day. The game number (such as 'Game 1', 'Game 2', etc.) must appear at the lower left-hand corner of the envelope.
5. All entries will be placed in a container and the winning entries will be drawn at random. Winners will be announced in the Colonist and Times on the Friday following the close of each game. The odds of winning will depend on the number of eligible entries received.
6. It is not necessary to buy the Times or Colonist to participate. Copies of the newspaper may be inspected free of charge at the newspaper's offices during regular business hours. Sorry, official letters will not be given over the phone.
7. Employees of the newspapers and members of their immediate families are not eligible to participate. Unclaimed or invalidly claimed prizes will be donated to a recognized charity at the close of the contest.
8. Winners agree to allow publication of their names, pictures and publicity in the Times and Colonist without additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all game rules.
9. Decisions of Victoria Press judges in all matters relating to the The Name Game will be final.

Leungs' enthusiasm isn't hard to figure

Among the new and certainly most-enthusiastic owners in standardbred racing circles are the Leung brothers of Vancouver.

Governors Star Boy, an eight-year-old gelding claimed for $3,500 about four months ago, makes it easy for Dan, Wing and Sun Leung to be enthusiatic.

The pride of the Winner Stables, Governors Star Boy reeled off his sixth straight victory at Sandown Park Saturday to overshadow an impressive victory by Maple Hills Smoky.

The six straight wiped out the Sandown record of five Governors Star Boy had shared with Dark Phanthom.

The brothers got into racing officially in March, 1978, when they formed Winner Stables. Their horses at Sandown also include Grape Time and Dungavel Duchess, but Star Boy is clearly their ace.

The gelding has won in various ways, going wire-to-wire or charging from behind. Governors Star Boy, moving steadily up the ranks to compete against $4,500, $5,000 and, finally, $6,000 claimers, also has won its last six with four different drivers.

Joe Hudon handled the reins for the first two wins in the current streak. When he was injured in a spill, Rick Graham got the call. John Glen was in the sulky for the next two and Saturday it was Willie Urquhart's turn to win with Governors Star Boy.

The Leungs only recently received their trainers' licenses and now are thinking, eventually, of driving.

Governors Star Boy, meanwhile, keeps firing enthusiasm of the brothers for harness racing.

Maple Hills Smoky overpowered a tough field to win Saturday's feature race with the third-fastest clocking ever recorded at Sandown. Driven by Jim Mohorovich, the big grey reeled off the mile in 2:02 1/5 — the best this season for the mile and only fourth-fifths of a second off the track record of 2:01 2/5 shared by Over Burden and Trevor John.

Favorite nipped

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — Happy Motoring, seemingly out of contention entering the stretch, charged up on the outside and nipped favored Hot Hitter at the wire Saturday to win the $134,568 final of the Cane Pace at Yonkers Raceway.

Leonard stops foe after four rounds

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — After four rounds of brutal punishment by Sugar Ray Leonard, Tony Chiaverini failed to answer the bell for the fifth round Sunday in a super welterweight fight.

Chiaverini, his eyes glazing over, stumbled back to his corner at the end of the fourth round in which Leonard pounded him with dozens of shots to the head.

Leonard, 151, had control of the fight from the outset. Chiaverini, 153, virtually had no defence against Leonard's lightning fast jab and short but powerful right.

With his victory at Caesars Palace, Leonard, of Palmer Park, Md., raised his pro record to 23-0.

Leonard, who received $140,000 for the fight, meets Wilfredo Benitez of Puerto Rico for the WBC's welterweight title Dec. 1. Site of the fight has not been announced but Caesars Palace officials are negotiating for it.

Chiaverini earned $61,000.

Affirmed tops $2 million

Times News Services

Favored Affirmed won the $500,000 Hollywood Gold Cup at Inglewood, Calif., Sunday, became thoroughbred racing's first $2-million horse, and came within one-fifth of a second of the world record for 1¼ mile.

Pressed all the way by Sirlad, the Irish-bred ridden by Darrel McHargue, the 1978 Triple Crown winner and horse-of-the-year held off a challenge in the stretch under the handling of Laffit Pincay to win the richest thoroughbred race ever held in North America by three-quarters of a length.

Text, one of a three-horse entry by Elmendorf Farms, finished third, fourth lengths behind Sirlad, and the Argentine-bred Farnesio was fourth in a field of 10.

Affirmed's time was a tick short of the world record of 1:58 1-5 set by Quack in this race in 1972.

The 1-5 favorite despite carrying 132 pounds, Affirmed won $275,000 to raise his career winnings to $2,044,218, moving him ahead of Forego and Kelso as the leading thoroughbred money-winner of all time.

The Gold Cup originally was slated as a $350,000 race but the purse was increased in what seemed to be a bid to get Alydar out West for a challenge against Affirmed, who beat him in each of the Triple Crown races they ran as three-year-olds in 1978.

A crowd of 50,200 came out to see Affirmed even though he was such an odds-on favorite. He still faced nine challengers, largely because second place was worth $100,000, with $72,000 to third and $36,000 to fourth.

The race was the finale in the West for Affirmed, who is scheduled for competiton in the East this summer before going into stud.

It also was the fourth consecutive triumph for the golden chestnut colt since Pincay took over the riding duties from Steve Cauthen.

Elsewhere in racing . . .

Jockey Sandy Hawley rode a majestic race at Toronto's Woodbine Park to get Kamar to the wire first in the $109,910 Canadian Oaks Stakes, Canada's richest race for three-year-old fillies.

Kamar, owned by Bahnam Yousif of King, Ont. came from off the pace in the mile and one-eighth Oaks as she slowly ran down pacesetter Feu d'Artifice at the wire to win by a neck.

Victory was worth $71,441 and climaxed a great comeback from a knee injury. Kamar underwent an operation and made her first appearance on June 7th, finishing fourth to Sundae Star.

Feu d'Artifice tried gamely to repulse Kamar's Charge. But Hawley, hitting left-handed, then right handed, drove his filly relentlessly to the wire.

Dom Alaric, a rangy black French-bred purchased for slightly more than a half million dollars, won the $25,000-added King Edward Gold Cup Handicap, Sunday's feature race at Woodbine . . . And at Vancouver's Exhibition Park, longshot Lunch Break and favored Satisfied Lady both came from last place to win divisions of the Buttons and Bows Handicap for three-year-old fillies . . . Lunch Break, owned and trained by Allan Jack, paid $31.50 after jockey Mark Walker brought the horse from the pack of the field to defeat Deja Sail by a length . . . Khalice was third and highly-favored Bronze Duchess was eighth in the field of 10 . . . Satisfied Lady, ridden by Brian Johnson, got up in the final strides to catch Mystical Power in the first division race . . . Bee Market was third.

Lawdy Miss Clawdy, the odds-on favorite, romped to an eight-length victory in the $55,800 Colfax Maid Stakes at Chicago's Arlington Park . . . Aunt Arctica finished second and Gal Nita Ann was third . . . At Hollywood Park, White Rammer, ridden by Bill Shoemaker, fought off a late charge by Arachnoid to win the $42,650 Triple Bend Handicap . . . Bad n' Big was third . . . At Belmont, Herbert Allen's La Soufriere was a surprise winner of the 36th running of the $56,000 New York Handicap on the grass . . . She won by a half length over Navajo Princess to pay $81.60, $22.60 and $9.80. . . Emerald Hill was third while the favored Late Bloomer finished fifth.

Barling signs Whitecap pact

VANCOUVER (CP) — Forward Brent Barling of Vancouver has signed a North American Soccer League contract with Vancouver Whitecaps which will allow him to continue playing for Canada's national junior team.

A Whitecap spokesman said Friday that Barling, 18, will train with the team for the balance of the 1979 season, dut will not play in any league games, thus retaining his World Cup eligibility.

Barling was Vancouver's first choice in the NASL's amateur draft this year, the 13th player taken in the first round.

Three-hour thriller captured by Chris

CHRIS EVERT LLOYD
. . . best-ever match

EASTBOURNE, England (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd saved three match points before winning a dramatic three-hour tennis marathon 7-5, 5-7, 13-11 over Martina Navratilova to win the Eastbourne international grass court title Saturday.

Lloyd's victory was a reversal of last year's final between the two stars that Navratilova won 9-7 in the third set after saving a match point.

Lloyd said afterward, "The match was the best and closest high-quality match I have ever played."

The players scarcely made an unforced error. In 48 games, they served only one double-fault each.

Navratilova's double-fault, however, came in the crucial 47th game. With the score tied at 11-11, she first double-faulted and then netted a simple volley to give the 24-year-old Lloyd the break she needed.

"At the end, whoever missed a couple of shots was going to lose," Navratilova said.

It was the 22-year-old reigning Wimbledon champion who cracked. But even in defeat she agreed with Lloyd.

"It was technically the hardest match I have ever played," she said. "It was so intense."

The crowd of 4,000 was gripped by the emotionally taut encounter that earned the winner $20,000.

But with Wimbledon on this week's schedule, both players realized that even this classic duel will soon be forgotten.

"This match will probably be better than Wimbledon," said a tired Navratilova. "But Wimbledon is the one that matters."

Nothing could dampen Lloyd's satisfaction with the longest match she has ever played as a professional.

"We put so much mental and emotional energy into the match," she said. "I felt I was going really well, and in the third set I got overheads I would not even have tried for in another match.

"With Wimbledon so close, neither of us really wanted a hard match. It just happened that way."

Amaya a contender

SURBITON, England (AP) — Big Vic Amaya of Holland, Mich., slammed home eight aces and 26 service winners Saturday and beat Mark Edmondson of Australia 6-4, 7-5 in the final of the Debenhams international grass court tennis tournament.

Amaya's hard hitting earned him a first prize of $9,000 and established him as a contender at this week's Wimbledon tournament, where he is unseeded.

The 6-foot-4 American had only once previously won a major tournament on grass — at Adelaide, Australia, two years ago.

He confessed after the match he is not really happy on grass, even though his power game is so well suited to it.

"I don't really like this surface because mentally itis very difficult to play on," Amaya said. "But I believe I am smart enough to know that my game is ideally geared to it."

Amaya was seeded No. 5 in this last warm-up event before Wimbledon. He knocked out the top seed, Brian Gottfried, on his way to the final.

Amaya, whose service has been outstanding all week, hit four aces in each set.

He began slowly and Edmondson, playing a sharp serve and volley game, made the first break to lead 2-1.

The Australian hardly made an error until the sixth game, when he double-faulted and lost his lead.

Amaya gradually went on top by the sheer power of his hitting. The second set went with service for 11 games, but Amaya always appeared more likely to break through and he finally did so in the 12th game to win the match.

Clippers' trainer dies

Ernie Cooke, 59, trainer of the Nanaimo Clippers of the British Columbia Junior Hockey League, died Friday afternoon while mountain climbing near Kasla in the Kootenay area.

Cooke, well known in Nanaimo for his voluntary training activities in a variety of sports, was sitting down to eat when he collapsed, friends in Kaslo said.

HANNOVER, West Germany (AP) — Fortuna Duesseldorf defeated Hertha BSC Berlin 1-0 in overtime Saturday to win the German Soccer Federation Cup.

Indies tops England to retain World Cup

LONDON (Reuter) — The West Indies defeated England by 92 runs in the series final Saturday at Lord's to retain the World Cup of cricket.

Batting first, the visitors amassed an impressive 286 runs for nine wickets in their 60 overs. England replied with a century opening stand by Geoff Boycott and Mike Brearley, but then succumbed to the bowling of Joel Garner, who claimed five wickets for 38 runs as the home side was all out for 194 in 51 overs.

Garner took all his wickets in an 11-ball burst, conceding just three runs in the process.

A fifth-wicket stand of 139 in 77 minutes by Viv Richardson and Collis King was the backbone of the West Indies' innings. King hit three sixes and 10 fours in his total of 77 and Richardson finished with 138, not out. It was only the second century of the series.

Lopez marks up 15th tour victory

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Nancy Lopez shot an even-par 72 Sunday to score a two-stroke win in the $100,000 Lady Keystone Open and her sixth victory on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour this season.

The $15,000 winner's share pushed her tour-leading earnings to $136,775.

Lopez finished two strokes ahead of veteran Kathy Whitworth and Sally Little.

The victory was the 15th in Lopez' brief career and pushed her career earnings to $349,827.

Dale Shaw of Victoria had scores of 73-80-76 for 229 but finished out of the money.

Lopez said she would not play in the next two LPGA tournaments, because she has set her sights on the United States Open three weeks away.

Squeezed by ICBC, says bodyshop man

BURNABY (CP) — A bodyshop owner says the Insurance Corp. of British Columbia is trying to put him out of business because of complaints he made earlier this year about the Crown corporation's handling of damage estimates.

Jim Jakab, owner of G and C Collision, claimed in January that the corporation was cheating on damage estimates and forcing mechanics to do shoddy repair work. Seven other bodyshop owners backed Jakab's statements.

Now the corporation is doing everything "humanly possible" to force him out of business, Jakab said, including harassing his customers, denying payment for work done and generally handling his customers in a way that creates a bad impression for his small business.

Jakab said customers have complained to him that ICBC called them at work to inspect cars.

And on two ocassions, he said, he has had to take customers to court to make the corporation pay for work already authorized by their claims department.

Bev Penhall, ICBC spokesman, said Jakab's allegations were not true and added it is customary for inspection agents to check out work done by bodyshop owners. He denied agents were concentrating on Jakab.

Further vote at press

VANCOUVER (CP) — Members of two unions who earlier rejected a tentative contract settlement at Pacific Press, which publishes Vancouver's two major daily newspapers, will vote again on the offer today.

A vote in favor of the settlement would clear the way for a return to work at the two newspapers, which have been shut by a strike-lockout since Nov. 1.

The decision by the 100-member Printing Pressmen's Union and the 55-member Wholesale Drivers' Union came after an emotion-charged meeting Saturday.

Jim Kinnaird, president of the British Columbia Federation of Labor, said after the meeting that he had explained the contract to members and answered questions,

"It's fair to say emotions are running fairly high in the organization in the belief that there is a certain amount of pressure put on them as individuals to ratify the agreement right now," said Kinnaird.

"They are obviously not happy with the final package that is being presented."

Four other unions which represent the overwhelming majority of 1,400 unionized employees at the morning Province and evening Sun have already voted to accept the tentative settlement and return to work. But under the arrangement between the six unions at the newspapers all must agree on a contract settlement.

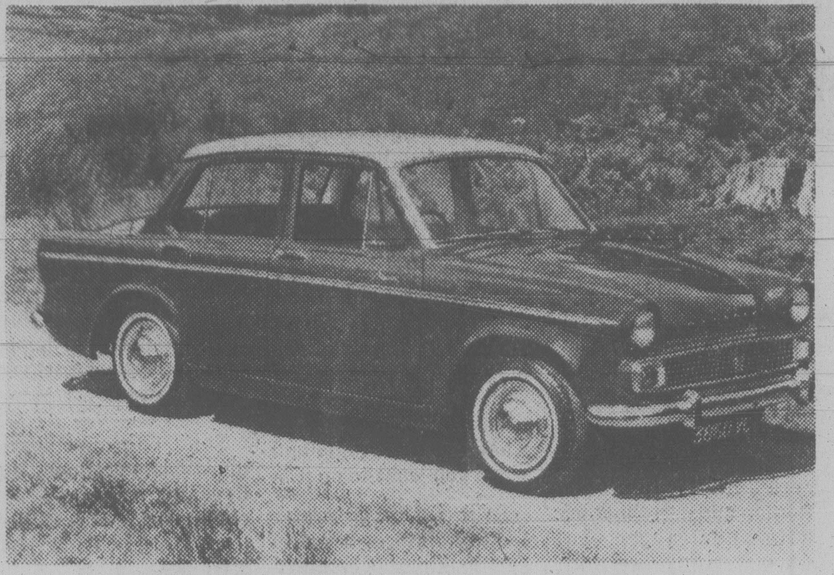
Fight inflation with a used car

By JAMES L. ROWE Jr.
The Washington Post



A well-maintained used car can be a good buy

NEW YORK — Buy a new car — don't buy someone else's lemon, new-car salesmen have advised potential customers for years.

But as new-car prices continue to climb and the cost of gasoline consumes an increasing amount of the average family's transportation budget, buying a used rather than a new car will become economically appealling, and necessary.

"Buying a well-maintained used car is an attractive, inflation-fighting alternative to a new car," claims former U.S. presidential consumer adviser Virginia Knauer:

"You can save 20 per cent on a one-year-old car and 40 to 50 per cent on a two-year-old car."

Furthermore, she says, the old saw about buying someone else's lemon need not be true.

"You don't have to be an automotive genius to avoid buying a lemon," she argues. Knauer is now a consultant to Hertz, which in addition to being the world's largest rental car company is also the largest seller of used cars (those it used to rent).

Beware of cars that are being sold "as is," and search for a used car that carries some sort of warranty, she says.

Never buy a used car without test-driving it extensively over all sorts of terrain and in all sorts of driving conditions — highway, start-stop rush-hour traffic and the like.

Ideally, the consumer should not buy a car that has not been looked at by a trusted mechanic. (But unless one has a friend who is a mechanic, the cost savings will evaporate if a potential buyer drags a mechanic to 10 or 12 lots following Knauer's advice to shop around.)

The average consumer, by following some simple procedures, can weed out a lot of cars on his or her own.

In a recent demonstration at the Waldorf sponsored by Hertz, Knauer gave these pointers as she walked reporters through a standard, thorough examination of a used car:

— Check the exterior for signs of rust and signs that the car has had rust problems.

By running a hand over the paint job, one can feel the small indentations in the surface that indicate the metal has been sanded down and repainted, a sign that the car has had rust problems. A car that rusted once probably will rust again.

— Look at the chrome. If the chrome is dented heavily, the car likely has had hard usage.

— Open the doors and look for evidence of a massive repainting of the car.

If the color of the interior door frame, or a part of it, is different from the exterior, the car has been repainted. That usually means the car has had massive body damage in a serious accident.

— Look at the interior of the car for general cleanliness, but also look under the dashboard and in the glove compartment for signs of flooding — usually a well-defined line, above which the car was dry and below which it was underwater.

Many cars on wholesale lots were flooded this spring and the electrical system of a car that was flooded will always be trouble. (A shady used-car dealer usually cleans up visible signs of water damage but often forgets the glove compartment and under the dash.)

— Check the odometer, then look at the brake and the gas pedals.

If the rubber casing on the pedals is worn almost to the metal and the odometer reads 40,000 miles, be suspicious. It is an offense to roll back odometers, but some folks still try it.

— Make sure all the accessories work. Check the lights — interior and beams — and the turn signals.

Turn on the radio, the air-conditioning and any other gadgets the car has.

Make sure the windows roll up and down, the vents open, the heater heats and the defroster defrosts.

— Lift the hood and inspect the engine for general cleanliness. Tug at the wires and make sure they are not frayed.

Look for leaks from any of the hoses and be sure that no hoses are sealed temporarily with tape.

— Loosen the insulation on the underside of the hood. If the engine has had a fire, the paint on the underside of the hood often has telltale blisters.

— Pull out the dipstick and make sure there are no little bubbles of water in the oil, a signal that a gasket might be blown somewhere.

Pull the dipstick for the transmission fluid and make sure it is bright red. Smell it, too. If it smells like varnish or has a burned smell it probably means the transmission needs an overhaul.

— If the radiator is new, be suspicious. It probably means the car had a front-end collision. Look at the coolant, make sure it is clean and free of oil.

— Press down with all your weight on each of the four fenders, then release. If the car bounces more than once, it means the shock absorbers are going — or gone.

— Check tire treads. If the wear is uneven, the front end of the car is probably out of kilter.

Thoroughly wet down all four tires with a hose, then drive the car slowly, in a straight line, over a dry patch of concrete. There should be only two parallel tracks. If there are four, it means either an alignment problem or a bent frame.

— Open the trunk and check the spare. Make sure it holds air. Also look in the trunk for signs of water. Look for signs of major new welds, an indication the car was in an accident.

— Drive the car over some clean newspapers or a clean concrete area and let it idle for five minutes. Then check the paper or concrete for signs of leaks.

Black dots mean a transmission fluid leak and brown dots mean a gas leak.

— Check the exhaust to be sure that it is clean.

— When driving the car, make sure the brakes are firm and smooth.

—Test the steering. The wheel should not move more than a few inches before the car starts to turn.

History repeats itself now that gasoline is becoming so precious. Auto owners bought gas tank locks during Second World War and again five years ago to stop gas-siphoning thefts. If that could be a problem for you now, there are still lots of tank locks on the market.

You can expect higher prices for fresh grapefruit, plus concentrated and chilled juice. Grapefruit supplies could be quite short before the new crop's available. Also, you should see few "specials" for canned and frozen peaches, pears and peas due to low warehouse inventories.

Room air conditioner shoppers, take note. If the unit is to cool only at night, you can reduce the BTU/hour requirement by as much as 30 per cent.

Insulation depth cuts back on the requirement, too. An oversized unit quickly cools without running long enough to dehumidify, resulting in cold, clammy air. A smaller capacity unit runs continuously to give more comfortable, drier air.

A fading azalea may bloom again as a houseplant if you sink the pot in semi-shaded soil outdoors.

Cover the bottom drain holes with nylon mesh or a mesh onion bag to keep out pill bugs. Trim top growth; in late July prune awkward branches. Pruning azaleas stimulates budding to come when you bring the pot inside this fall.

Old insecticides stored in the garage can change chemically to become highly toxic. Use them and they can kill insects and plants, warns plant-care specialists. Also, never put liquid fertilizer in a spray container that once held spray-on insecticide. The residue from the insecticide is almost impossible to remove from any container.

Travel simply may not by your cup of tea

the fourth quarter

Travel may not be for you.

I had a secretary once who did an excellent job of arranging details for my frequent business trips, often to quite popular spots — London, Paris, famous hotels amd spas in North America and abroad.

"I'm glad I'm not you, always rushing around," she'd say. "I'd rather sleep in my own bed."

Back then I thought she was a bit queer not to envy the person who could see far-away places. Now that I am older, I understand; she was a genuine homebody.

When you retire, people expect you to travel; you may tell your fellow employees you are "going to see a lot of the world now" even though you settled for holidays and trips close to home during your working years.

Don't force yourself. If you take that first longer trip and come home swearing "never again," perhaps that assessment is not far off the mark — for you.

You may recall my column, a couple of years ago, in which I emphasized that there is no basic difference between rambling in Rome and checking the neighborhood next to you. I argued that you can have just as much fun and get just as much satisfaction out of trips within short miles of your permanent address.

As the mechanics of travel grow more complex, airports and highways more crowded, accommodation facilities more expensive and noisier, you may be smart to choose casual outings closer to home, relaxation on your own patio with quieter pursuits of your own design.

Writing in Modern Maturity Richard Rowan says of his parents, as they mark a half century of marriage: "As for travelling and vacation — never, or hardly ever. They're both too comfortable with their home habits to take on the inconveniences of travel. They stay away from the big, nearby cities because the strains and irregularities seem greater than the rewards."

Writing about his own retirement plans Mr. Roman adds: "I think my wife and I agree that when we retire we must greatly reduce our involvement with the lives of others, if we are to achieve the degree of calmness we want in our lives. If there are quiet interests and creative hobbies that bring satisfaction, one doesn't need to be busy and distracted."

This is not quite my philosophy for the senior years and it may not be yours; but some of you may find it fits in fine with your plans for the time when you can choose what you want to do and when you want to do it.

So if you really prefer to stay close to home in surroundings as comfortable as an old shoe and to "cultivate your garden," as Voltaire put it, don't be ashamed of this preference.

Don't let those world travellers lord it over you with boasts about Big Ben or Buenos Aires.

Content with your smaller world, don't let them persuade you that you are missing something essential to happiness by passing up travels farther afield.

Housewives dissatisfied

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Many housewives are dissatisfied with their role in the home but have no intention of entering the job market, says a University of Michigan researcher.

Alfreda Iglehart, a post-doctoral fellow at the university's research centre, said she based her finding on studies conducted in 1957 and 1976.

"While more wives in 1976 say they plan to work in the future than did in 1957, the majority of housewives questioned both years say they don't plan to take jobs outside the home," she said.

Still, she said, "household tasks which were respectable in the 1950s now are called trivial and exploitive."

Switch to LPG takes book work

WHEELS

by Mike Lamm

DEAR MIKE: I'd like to convert my 1973 Dodge van from gasoline to propane or LPG fuel. There's only one place in this area that does such conversions. Their estimate over the phone came to about $1000. Can I tackle this conversion myself, and if so, how? — TAKING GAS

DEAR TAKING: It depends on how handy you are. Go to your local library — there are several books on the subject, including a couple of how-to's.

Actual step-by-step instructions are too long to go into here, but the conversion is largely a matter of plumbing. You'll probably have to buy at least some of your hardware from your local conversion shop.

DEAR MIKE: Whenever it rains — or when I drive through a car wash — the engine in my 1976 Pacer sputters and stumbles and refuses to run right. The dealer hasn't been able to come up with an answer. Hope you can.— WET

DEAR WET: When oil and dirt cake onto certan ignition parts, and when this poultice gets moist, it conducts electricity. Check the inside of your distributor; also your spark plugs and wiring.

Sometimes, if the insulation on your plug wires is beginning to crack, moisture can cause arcing between nearby wires or wires that touch.

DEAR MIKE: Fewer people seem to be running with their headlights on during daytime "for safety." Is this because lights consume energy? Or can this run down the battery or shorten alternator life? — WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: The amount of energy used to generate electricity for headlights is negligible. It's much less, for example, than using your car's air conditioner.

Nor can the practice harm the alternator. And the only way it can run down the battery is if you forget to turn off your lights when you park.

DEAR MIKE: I am in dire need of a master brake cylinder for my 1958 Cadillac. I've had no luck obtaining one through local parts stores or from the dealer. Can you help me, please? — CAD-WITHOUT BINDERS

DEAR CAD: Certainly. Try the Cadillac-LaSalle Club, Inc., 3340 Poplar Dr., Warren, Mich. 48091. Their parts locator ought to be able to steer you.

DEAR MIKE: Referring to your answers to readers with cars that surge or hesitate — the problem is not always with the carburetor.

Defective electronic ignition systems sometimes cause these symptoms. I think you tend to equate surge and stumble with carburetors only. — SURGENT PEPPER

DEAR SURGENT: You're right — I do tend to. And you're also right that electronic ignitions sometimes go bad. Thanks.

You're invited to send you automotive questions to Michael Lamm, c/o Victoria Times, Box 7607—B, Stockton, Calif. 95207. Not all questions can be answered personally. Those of broadest reader interest will appear in future columns.

His kilts have an Irish stitch

OWEN SOUND, Ont. (CP) — He's allergic to oatmeal, doesn't drink Scotch whisky and dislikes haggis. But when it comes to kilts, Tom Fox is a Scotsman in his element.

Fox wears kilts, repairs kilts and makes kilts. Every stitch is done by hand.

His mother and his aunts were tailors in Scotland. When just a boy, Fox was kept busy threading needles for them. But it's his Irish mother he credits with teaching him the skill of kilt making.

Fox came to Canada in 1952, but it wasn't until he suffered a back injury and underwent surgery in 1970 that he seriously involved himself in the highly skilled job of making kilts.

Kilt making requires skilled tailoring. There are 30 pleats in a kilt and each is hand sewn to a depth of eight inches.

There is no machine stitching on Fox's kilts. He makes his own leather straps and also supplies the buckles, lining and thread.

He is able to get most of the standard tartans from Nova Scotia and says the easiest tartans to work with are the Stewarts and MacLeans.

He says the Black Watch are "devils to do because of the dark navy blue and black."

Slim skirts boost sales of lingerie

TORONTO (CP) — Sales of all undergarments for women have increased recently, possibly because of the trend to slim skirts that demand lingerie that smooths the figure, manufacturers say.

The trend is towards lightweight, elasticized bodysuits, panties and briefs in two-way stretch spandex.

Shelves make easy storage space under window for children's toys

Wood frame changes wall

By PAULINE GRAVES

When it comes to windows, most people think of curtains or draperies or a combination of the two.

Woven wood blinds offer a handsome alternative, as do laminated shades and the recently developed narrow slat louvred blinds.

But a person can go a step further and put these products together so that they dress up a window in a totally individual design. And many times a homeowner can do the work himself.

Such is a situation in the window wall shown here, by Norman Colburt. Actually the window itself makes little news. The sheer curtains are gathered on rods top and bottom, but they are pulled apart in the centre by three-inch wide tie backs made of the bedspread fabric.

As a result there is a diamond-shaped opening in the centre which permits a glimpse of the outdoor and facilitates sliding the window open or closed.

Newsworthy, though, is the wall itself, dedicated to increasing the window's importance and making it seem larger than its true size. Rich, brown wallpaper covers the entire end space.

Superimposed over the paper is a large white frame made of 1x6s, mitred at the corners. Its proportions are based on the principles of framing a picture. Space between the picture and its frame most narrow across the top, equal on the sides, and largest at the bottom. Space at the top is five inches, on the sides six inches and at the bottom 12 inches.

The dramatic effect of brown and white could be achieved with paint, but the wood is more unusual and adds dimension.

Some like it cold

DETROIT (UPI) — Detroit Zoo officials have discovered an unexpected bonus from an April ice storm that knocked power out for 48 hours at the reptile exhibit.

Kathy Latinen, assistant curator for reptiles, said the quick drop in temperatures after the electricity failed triggered the breeding instincts among several species, including the reticulated python, a native of Southeast Asia, and the California king snake.

A pair of spotted turtles also mated, Latinen said. None of them had ever bred before: "The sudden drop stimulated them and they took a sudden interest in each other."

The king snake laid 10 eggs and the turtle produced a single egg.

YOUR HEALTH

by L. L. Coleman, MD

Drinker begins to have doubts

I'm not a heavy drinker, but I have drunk alcohol over a long period of time. When a friend of mine, who is really a heavy drinker, developed cirrhosis of the liver, I began to worry about myself.' — Mr. C. O.

DEAR MR. O.:

You are very wise to give consideration to the state of your health, and especially to your liver since you do have a history of prolonged alcoholic intake.

Doctors have observed for a long time that people react with tremendous anxiety when a friend or relative comes down with a heart, liver or lung condition, or other severe medical problems. Their anxiety mounts until they seek the medical attention that they probably have avoided themselves.

Yes, it is possible to study your liver and to learn if it is functioning properly. The so-called "liver profile" is a series of chemical tests which, with remarkable accuracy, reflects the health of the liver and its capacity to function. There are probably about 15 complicated and sophisticated tests included in these liver function studies. These should be done in your case, mostly to give you the assurance that you obviously need.

My four-year-old daughter was left with two scars on her face after a bout of chicken pox. Our concern is whether these will eventually go away when she gets older. If not, can anything be done about it later on? - Mrs. R. E.

DEAR MRS. E.:

Facial scars caused by chicken pox, acne and injury can be removed in a number of ways. Small ones can often be eliminated by a process known as "dermabrasion". It is a simple procedure and is often done in the doctor's office. After anesthetizing the skin, a high-speed rotary abrasive brush removes the outer layer of skin. Then, when healing follows, a smooth surface replaces the pitted marks. The crust that appears remains on the skin for about 10 days. In carefully selected cases, this procedure is very effective.

Only in some isolated cases is plastic surgery resorted to.

Ground rules . . . or a motel

Dear Abby

by Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Our son and his wife are both 30. He's an assistant professor and she's a social worker. They've been married for a year and lived together for two years before that. They're coming to visit us for two weeks this summer and I am not looking forward to it.

I love them both, but two bigger slobs I've never met! Thank God, they found each other.

They were here last Christmas and my lovely home looked like a pigpen during their entire stay. I was exhausted picking up after them. I finally blew my stack just before they left. They apologized and we parted friends.

After they left, my husband told me that if I can't keep my trap shut (his words) and treat our children like guests, we should put them up at a nearby motel when they visit.

Abby, do you think I was out of line for telling those kids off?

—HAD IT

DEAR HAD IT: Lay down some ground rules. If they break the rules, and you can't keep your trap shut (his words), put the slobs up at a motel.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the wife asking how to get her attorney husband to update his will hit home with me.

Here's how I got my father to update his 30-year-old will. He had left everything to my mother who has been dead for 15 years!

I sent my father a copy of my will, asking for his suggestions on how to dispose of whatever he was leaving to me as I had no children. He promptly updated his will.

— G.A.G.

DEAR G.A.G.: Thanks for a good sugestion. Read on for another:

DEAR ABBY: My husband, who is an attorney, kept putting off updating his will. My nagging did no good. Finally, I got disgusted and made an appointment with one of the most prominent and expensive estate lawyers in town. Then I casually told my husband about it. That did it. — NO DUMMY

HARD OF HEARING? No matter what he did, 11-year-old Aaron Davis of Shepherdsville, Ky., couldn't make his frog — named Frog — jump. Frog ignored it all in the frog-jumping contest at the county fair.

It's hardly a dainty sport but women go for squash

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — No matter how you look at it, squash isn't a dainty sport. After all, it's hard to be graceful when you're sweating profusely, grimacing and flailing your arms in the air.

Squash players have compared their energetic games to running the mile in 30 seconds, getting hit by a truck, or stepping inside a 10-speed blender.

Exhausting work, but fun. At least, that's the attitude of many Canadians who spend their leisure time bouncing a tiny hollow ball off four walls.

Squash, like tennis, has experienced a tremendous boom in the last decade. Many of the newer players are women and, surprisingly enough in this traditionally male-dominated field, many of the top-ranked players are female.

Five years ago, one out of every five squash players in Canada was a woman. Today they account for almost half the country's 100,000 players.

A large percentage of the sport's players are based in the Toronto area, which was Canada's first main squash centre.

London racquet clubs say women are taking up the sport at a steady pace. Because participants can play, take a sauna and shower in less than an hour, the game appeals to both working women and housewives.

An average player might play two or three 40-minute games a week, and such regular play contributes to over-all fitness.

Most players agree that it's an easy game to pick up.

"Anybody can play it," says Sherry Nenadovich, publicity director for Squash Ontario. "You don't even have to be well co-ordinated. After a few times on the court, you don't feel like a turkey out there."

Paris Cabbie protected by her pooch

PARIS (AP) — "Watch this," said the cab driver. She gave a low whistle and from the floor beside her a Doberman pinscher uncurled, leaped on the seat and terrified her passenger with a menacing glare.

"With Dingo, I have nothing to fear," she said. "Don't take it personally, but if I said 'Sha!' he would tear you to pieces."

Not all Paris drivers feel that confident. Three have been killed in robberies in the last year, and when a 42-year-old woman driver was robbed and strangled in a Paris suburb earlier this month, Paris' 14,350 chauffeurs went on the warpath.

Saying the police do nothing to protect them, they went on strike for seven hours, covered their roof lights in black as a symbol of mourning and formed a 1,000-taxi cortege for their slain colleague, Elise Barradat.

Dingo's owner, one of 1,200 women driving cabs in Paris, trusts her dog so completely that she plies the toughest streets of Paris at 2 a.m. The law forbids cabbies to carry clubs, let alone firearms, in their vehicles. So attack dogs have become the most-favored defence.

A New York cabbie might envy his Paris counterpart, since violence here is nowhere near the U.S. level. Since 1946, 36 drivers have been killed — a comparatively low rate.

But the cabbies say attacks are on the increase. There were three in the Paris area in one recent week, in one of which a driver was slashed while fending off an assault by a 16-year-old schoolboy.

Many cab drivers would like an armor-plated glass partition between themselves and the passenger, as in London and New York. But the average Paris cab, a small European car, is too cramped.

"If I put a partition in here you'd have to leave your legs outside," says one driver. He carries a corrugated iron bar under his seat for self-defence. "By law I'm not allowed to have this. But if the police can't protect me, I'll do it myself."

Drivers say they are not even allowed to carry a wrench or screwdriver in their glove compartment unless it is in a padded pouch.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♡	Pass	2 ♢
2 ♠	Pass	Pass	4 ♡
Pass	Pass	4 ♠	6 ♡

Opening lead — seven of spades.

Bidding is a form of science, but, as in many scientific endeavors, one cannot achieve perfection. The theoretical must often give way to the practical, and some bids are merely general-direction shots where the marksman can only hope he winds up hitting the target.

Consider this deal played in a match between France and Italy in the European championship. At the first table, North-South were Trezel and Jais for France, and East-West were Belladonna and Avarelli for Italy.

Trezel was in a difficult position after East bid two spades and South identified a minimum opening bid by passing. Trezel thought there might be two spade losers, and he therefore abandoned the possibility of making a slam by jumping to four hearts.

But when Avarelli, after two passes, elected to sacrifice with four spades, the bid boomeranged. Trezel decided that Jais very likely had a singleton spade and, accordingly, he leaped to six hearts. Jais handled the diamonds in the best possible style and scored 980 points, losing only a spade trick.

At the second table, Forquet (North for Italy) also got to six hearts. But disaster struck in an unusual way. The French East led the ace of spades and shifted to a club.

At this point, Forquet injudiciously claimed the slam, not realizing that he might lose a diamond trick if either defender had four to the jack. His opponents naturally contested the claim.

The tournament director was called and gave the only ruling he could under the laws. Forquet was not allowed to take a diamond finesse against the jack and he went down one. So the French team managed to gain 1,030 points on this one deal. C'est la guerre!

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast For Tuesday, June 26
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): All signals are "Go" for variety, change, style, creativity, personal magnetism and love. Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarius persons figure prominently. Young persons seek your counsel. Avoid any hint of pomposity.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Home, basic obligations, building on solid structure, closing a deal — these are featured. Older individual could lend moral and financial support. Change of residence or lifestyle ranks high on agenda.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Accent on trips, relatives, ideas defining terms, getting rid of outdated material and streamlining techniques. Pisces, Virgo individuals figure in scenario. Avoid trying to force your views. Humor, light touch prove winning combination.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent on achievement, responsibility, pressure and payoff from investments — financial and emotional. Agreement or contract provides added recognition. Capricorn is involved — so is another Cancer.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Cycle high — get going, make known your views. Illustrate and dramatize — present "arguments" in graphic manner. Accent on personality, appearance, original concepts. Aries, Libra persons play roles.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Go ahead — make a start. Read Leo message. Emphasize independence, originality — and vulnerability. Means take a chance on love. Express feelings. Break away from fears, doubts, scripting which dictates superstitious following of meaningless tradition.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accent on fulfilling desires, following through on hunch, learning through process of teaching. Aquarian figures prominently. You regain what was lost or stolen. You also recover sense of direction. The ship is righted!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Emphasis on authority, prestige, special assignment, dialogue with superiors. Forces tend to be scattered. Be selective. Door of opportunity is open — know it, enter while standing tall.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasis on travel, study, breaking through to apply "creative touch." Aquarius, Scorpio, Leo natives figure prominently. What occurs could be largely a matter of circumstances. Key is to keep up with the times. Means be open to knowledge, customs and language.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Dig for information — money, partnership, important alliances are involved. Be analytical. Someone may want something for nothing — from you. Seek facts, figures, reasons. One close to you deserves a reasonable hearing. Act accordingly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Accent on patience, legal ramifications, making adjustments, accommodating needs of one you love. Message will become crystal-clear. Taurus, Libra, Aries persons figure in scenario. Be receptive, avoid challenges, confrontations. Wait!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Study Aquarius message. Maintain moderate pace, avoid sensationalism. One who makes "fantastic" claims should be tolerated in bemused fashion, not believed. Emphasis on dependents, pets, employment, relative in transit.

IF JUNE 26 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have ability to survive, to respond well under pressure, to battle odds and to succeed when most persons thought you would "take the count." You can organize, handle responsibility and you have an affinity with time. Means you almost instinctively perceive when to make a move or take a stand. Capricorn, Cancer persons play important roles in your life. You travel in August, social life increases, horizons expand, you get needed vacation or change from routine. Contact you made during June will prove of value. You are loyal, stubborn, capable of amassing a fortune. Love, however, means more to you than money. You are better at running your own business than when working on a "nine-to-five" job. Beginning with October, you'll be happier, more creative and more in love.

"So you got the glasses," said Stan. "At Stinsons, like I told you?"

Maggie smiled. "Exactly the same, but not there," she replied. "Yours were thirty-six cents each, but at the new store across the road they were a penny cheaper, so I got two more of them for the same money."

How many did she buy?

(Answer tomorrow)

Friday's answer: The tree was thirty-two metres from each side.

$50 million mop-up bill in B.C. flood

TERRACE (CP) — The holes that doctors drilled in Jim Wallington's skull have not yet healed and Henry Marynovich missed a whole winter's trapping.

Both have complaints about the way their claims for compensation were handled after torrential rains and flooding devastated the Skeena River valley last fall.

On the whole, however, residents in the area around this city, surrounded by British Columbia's central coastal mountains, seem pleased with the assistance they received in mopping up damage to their flooded homes and property.

A team of 16 independent adjusters handled about 750 claims and so far $1.75 million has been paid out through a federal-provincial emergency assistance program. But the final bill for damage in the area's worst flood ever will probably hit $50 million.

R.E. Neale, head of the provincial emergency program, said fixing homes, small businesses and highways will cost at least $12 million. Repair work on washouts along the Canadian National Railways line to Prince Rupert and on damage to B.C. Hydro power lines and Pacific Northern Gas's natural gas pipeline will cost another $35 million by the time it's completed.

As well, the rain-swollen river wiped out 40 per cent of last year's pink salmon spawn, a loss that will have an economic impact on the area during the 1980 fishing season.

The elements were not kind to Terrace in 1978. There wasn't enough rain last summer as a forest fire burned more than 256 square kilometres in the mountains just east of here. In October, there was too much.

Falling after an early freeze, the rain rolled off frozen ground into the mountain streams that feed the Skeena. Quiet creeks became raging torrents, knocking out three steel-span bridges along Highway 16 and closing Terrace's only road link with the Interior for 10 days.

Highway still pocked with detour

That highway and Highway 25 running east to Prince Rupert are still pocked with gravel stretches and detours in many of the 50 spots where the road slid away from its precarious bed, hewed from the sides of mountains tight against the river.

Two CNR trainmen were killed when their train derailed at a washout and several other people had narrow escapes when they ignored police warnings not to travel.

Wallington, a 34-year-old logger, was one man who went through and wishes now he hadn't.

He went with a friend to check a skidder he had left in the mountains. The bridge at Little Oliver Creek, which they crossed safely on the way out, collapsed as they crossed it on the way back. Wallington woke up in the hospital with a broken neck.

Seven months later, his neck has healed but the holes in his skull which supported his neck brace are still oozing. He got nothing for the skidder he lost and the compensation he received for lost wages will probably help pay for his friend's new truck.

"As for breaking my neck, that's one of those things," he said. "But you pay taxes, they tell you to be safe on the road, and then they build bridges on pea gravel that washes out the first time it floods.

"Yeah, I feel a little bitter."

So does Marynovich, a 56-year-old trapper whose $36,000 damage claim was disallowed because his lease to live on Crown land along the Skeena floodplain absolves the government of responsibility for flood damage.

Two-foot waves washed through

Two-foot waves washed through his cabin, ruining heaters and buckling panelled walls. Marynovich said he also lost 575 traps, 600 pelt stretchers and the use of his three snowmobiles, preventing him from working his trapline along the Gitnadoix River.

Marynovich received a $10,379 grant to help him start trapping again, but one government employee, who didn't want his name used, said that wasn't enough.

"As far as I'm concerned, the guy's being shafted," he said. "He didn't get his claim settled until March and he lived on mush all winter long.

"No one put that clause in with the thought of disaster in mind. They were thinking of normal year-to-year flooding."

Neale, the emergency program chief, disagreed.

"He was just in an unfortunate situation legally. By the terms of the lease on the land, it (flooding) had to be an accepted risk on his part. I feel it was a fair ruling."

The government was also criticized for its original decision not to pay for damage to cottages and second homes around Lakelse Lake, about 15 kilometres east of Terrace and one of the hardest-hit areas.

After a string of protests that included a letter-writing campaign, the government decided in March to give 50 cents for every dollar of damage done to second homes and recreational equipment. That decision appeased most locals.

CITY WATCHDOG RICHARDS. Report #114. Congratulations go to Mason A. Sheldrick, Comptroller-Treasurer-Collector for the very informative pamphlet regarding 1979 property taxes for the City of Victoria, available when you pay your taxes before the June 29th deadline. Once again, Your City's Watchdog feels that if policemen were on footpatrol on the downtown streets, possibly they could have prevented $3,450 in damages which resulted in a motorist's six-block wrecking spree. If you wish further information regarding City matters, please phone 383-6259, C. Joe Richards, Your City's Watchdog, or write to PO Box 154. Seen-In-Passing: Approximately twenty policemen and firemen working for over 45 minutes to free a lady motorist pinned inside the wreckage of her car. Your City's Watchdog feels that to prevent any more serious accidents of this kind on the Death Alley section of Esquimalt Road between Dominion Road and Head Street that there should be large concrete highway dividers placed on the centre line for a six-month trial. Post Scripts: Many Thanks to Tony, ACE and BDC Couriers for receiving good service. Congratulations to Saanich Police becoming a community neighborhood police force.

The Lord is my Shepherd

I shall not want

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures

He restoreth my soul

He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake

Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death

I will fear no evil

For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff
they comfort me

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies

Thou anointest my head with oil

My cup runneth over

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

Colors can still flower in fall

GARDENING

Hilda Beastall

Now that summer is officially with us, the colors of summer are unfolding more quickly.

If we have planned wisely, much of late summer's color will be with us in early fall and there will be no need to talk about the has-beens of spring and summer.

Apart from background shrubs flowering now to produce bountiful berries for migrating and wintering birds, some of the early fall color comes from herbaceous perennial plants.

By late summer, there will be the first of the perennial asters in mauve and purple, to be followed by the pinks, whites and reds. In late August we see early rudbeckias in gold and brown, the tall scented white Artemisia lactiflora, brilliant gaillardias in bronze and gold, and heleniums of many combinations of yellow, brown and red.

No need for excuses about the garden being "over" by the end of August with these glowing colors that carry through into fall.

If your garden is new and these plants are not already yours, there is a chance they may be found in nurseries who grow them in containers so that customers can transplant from container to garden even on a hot summer day.

There will be no setback or shock if the plants are well watered before removal and again afterwards when in the planting position. Daily attention to watering (over the foliage for this purpose as well as into the soil) will prevent wilting and new roots will be made at once into your soil.

Another late summer perennial is the unusually fine Physostegia virginiana with rich pink blossoms crowded on the top six inches or so of a five-foot stem. Strangely hinged, each blossom may be re-positioned on its stem, earning the name of Obedience-plant.

A sturdy perennial that does better in the good soil of a flower bed than in a rocky ledge like like most of its alpine relatives is Sedum sieboldi in any of the named varieties from pale pink to dark crimson.

This sedum is a real beauty, cool with its thick succulent grey leaves in early summer, topped by stems clustered with small warm pink or crimson flowers by late August. They last well on the plants, which are surprisingly winter hardy. They disappear entirely above ground, but new growth appears in true perennial fashion, from the underground roots each spring.

Dahlias and chrysanthemums are other plants that begin flowering in late summer and go through into fall until hard frosts and fall rains put an end to the display.

Colors begin to look their best in the garden not in early summer when the sun is at its height, but in late August into September as shadows lengthen. It is then that a garden with color will be seen at its best. The shadows bring out the light of the colors, even as the light deepens the shadows. I think colors never mean quite so much as they do in the fall garden.

Or perhaps it seems this way to plant lovers because they realize how soon the colors must go.

60 object to plan

DUNCAN — The north end community plan has met objections from ratepayers who feel they have not been properly informed.

About 60 residents of Chemainus, Crofton and Westholme attended a council meeting to complain they have not been given enough time to study the plan. Many said they were unwilling to accept a report and maps they did not understand.

Spokesman Stafford Andrews said many of the maps were a disgrace.

Rerouting of the new Crofton Road was a major source of concern. A number of Westholme residents expressed fear the new road would disrupt the rural way of life they now enjoy.

After listening to complaints for an hour, council adjourned the public hearing and promised to make more copies of the plan and accompanying maps available.

Estuary proposal 'sellout to industry'

DUNCAN — A proposed zoning bylaw on the Cowichan estuary was called a sellout by evironmentalists on the weekend.

"This is a complete and utter sellout to industry," Cowichan Estuary Preservation Society representative Ann Holden said of a North Cowichan proposal to zone as light industrial land on which a Doman Industries sawmill is located.

She said the proposal "ignores the community plan, the lack of a task force report and the wishes of the area's residents."

The bylaw would permit the use of sawmills, veneer plants, plywood mills, planer mills, dry kilns, pellet plants, partical board plants and a wide range of lumber manufacturing.

North Cowichan Ald. Graham Bruce, largely responsible for the new zoning, defends the limited industrial zoning as a move to eliminate the chance of a pulp and paper mill going up on the site.

Holden said this was a smokescreen.

"I don't think Doman ever intended to put a pulp mill in at this site," she said.

She said the land is zoned rural and should remain that way.

Broadbent sees gain from MP's conviction

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democrat Leader Ed Broadbent said today a new MP will work harder for his northern constituents because he has been caught breaking federal narcotic laws.

Broadbent issued a statement several days after Peter Ittinuar, New Democrat elected in the Northwest Territories seat of Nunatsiaq May 22, was fined $200 for possession of one gram of cocaine.

Ittinuar, first Inuit MP, had pleaded guilty to the charge.

Broadbent said:

"I have discussed the matter with Mr. Ittinuar.

"We both agreed it was a serious matter to break the Criminal Code. That is beyond doubt.

"Nonetheless it is a first offence and Mr. Ittinuar has assured me that it will not happen again and I completely accept his word on the matter.

"I am convinced that Mr. Ittinuar will represent his constituents in the House of Commons in an exemplary fashion in the new session of Parliament.

"If anything, this unfortunate experience will cause him to make even greater efforts on behalf of the people of the North."

Ittinuar was arrested this month when RCMP found the drug in his possession as he sat with a man in a car behind a city restaurant.

Conviction under the Criminal Code does not effect a person's parliamentary status. Alistair Fraser, Commons clerk, said last week it would need a Commons motion to unseat Ittinuar.

Ittinuar won the new seat of Nanatsiaq by a narrow margin of 77 votes over his Liberal opponent.

He is a former executive-director of Inuit Tapirisat, which represents most Inuit, and has taught at Ottawa University.

Pandas recover

TOKYO (AP) — The severe winter of 1976 almost wiped out the rare giant pandas of China's southwestern mountains, but they have made a comeback in recent years, the official Xinhua (Hsinhua) news agency said Sunday. Arrow bamboo, the pandas only food, died out in the cold.

Links purchase rejected

A heavy tax levy in the Albert Head area this year was the last straw for Metchosin voters who decided Saturday not to purchase a 48-acre golf course and an additional 15 acres of land.

The referendum was defeated in a 318-to-220 vote.

Metchosin regional director Mac Tipton said today the referendum followed too closely on the heels of a substantial tax increase for area residents.

The $725,000 package would have cost Mechosin residents less than one mill, Tipton said.

About one-third of the price would have come from a provincial government grant and revenues from operation of the golf course also would have paid for some of it, he said.

The nine-hole Metchosin Golf Course and the additional 15 acres of land are on Pears Road.

Course owner Hugh Francis said today members are very disappointed Metchosin didn't accept the sale offer.

The course is no longer for sale, said Francis, who took it off the open market when Metchosin indicated an interest in purchasing it with government assistance.

The 80-year-old Francis said he has decided to keep it as an investment and plans to build a driving range next year.

Metchosin has enough parkland but needs playing fields and the Capital Region District will probably make further efforts to acquire land for ball parks.

Unless a land purchase could be funded completely by government grants such as the provincial lottery fund, another referendum would likely be required, Tipton said.

Voter turnout was 35 per cent. All Metchosin residents and property owners were eligible to vote in the referendum.

Youth, 16 dies from burns

A 16-year-old boy who was burned in a fire in his home two weeks ago died Sunday in Victoria General Hospital's burns unit.

Peter Henn received burns to close to 90 per cent of his body in the fire which broke out in the bedroom of his home at 2648 Asquith shortly before 6 a.m. June 10.

An inquest is expected to be held but no date has been set.

Victoria fire officials believe the boy fell asleep while smoking.

He fled the fire by jumping from his second storey bedroom window before collapsing on the front lawn of a nearby house.

Colquitz double-header

Two students will share Colquitz junior secondary school's top award for the leading all-round Grade 10 pupil.

Debbie Wong and Ken Baker received the Colquitz trophy during the school's 23 awards day Friday.

During the ceremony Grade 10 first class honor students received certificates presented by former Colquitz trophy winner Monika Moar.

Whaling 'act of war'

REYKJAVIK (AP) — An Icelandic coast guard gunboat escorted the Greenpeace environmental organization's ship Rainbow Warrior back into Reykjavik harbor late Saturday, its captain, Peter Masson, protesting what he claims as "an act of war."

The Rainbow Warrior was arrested by coastguards last Tuesday during its campaign since May to disrupt Icelandic whale fishing.

The vessel had been ordered to remain in port pending resolution in sherrif's court in Reykjavik of a demand for an injunction against Rainbow Warrior by the Icelandic Whaling Co., Hvalur Ltd.

Hvalur Ltd., applied for the injunction against Greenpeace activities on the whaling grounds, alleging that the Rainbow Warrior interfered repeatedly earlier this month with the harpooning of whales by the whaler Hvalur 8. The company claims the harpooning of whales is perfectly legal and that the Rainbow Warrior has prevented the company from lawful activities and put the crews of the whaling boats in danger.

A judge of the sheriff's court ordered the Rainbow Warrior to remain in habor until the court rules in the injunction case. David McTaggart of Vancouver, a Greenpeace leader, has protested this as unlawful and claims it is Greenpeace that is in under arrest by the Icelandic government.

Sheriff's court is expected to rule on the case Tuesday.

Meanwhile, the lawyer for the Greenpeace movement, Hoerdur Olafsson, has asked the Icelandic Supreme Court to declare unlawful the sequestration of the ship.

McTaggart said Saturday that Olafsson sent the following telegram to sheriff's court, the Icelandic justice ministry, the Icelandic coast guard and the immigration office:

"Peter Masson and David McTaggart have authorized me to accept service of injunction in a binding manner. I have, therefore, told the Rainbow Warrior that it could proceed from here."

And within three hours the Rainbow Warrior lifted anchor in Reykjavik outer harbor and sailed out.

A few hours later the justice ministry ordered the coast guard to bring the ship back in accordance with instructions of the sheriff's court. A coastguard gunboat stopped the Rainbow Warrior a few kilometres off the Reykjanes peninsula.

Religious riots cause 27 to die

CALCUTTA (Reuter) — Twenty-seven persons were killed in three days of Hindu-Moslem riots in the Nadia district of West Bengal, Chief Minister Jyoti Basu said Sunday.

Basu said 633 houses were burned down, including about 250 in a single village.

321 dissenters 'punished'

LONDON (AP) — Amnesty International said Sunday it knows of 321 Soviet dissenters punished for "non-violent exercise of their human rights" since the Soviet Union signed the Helsinki agreement in 1975.

The London-based human rights group, which won the Nobel peace prize in 1977, said it released its statistics on the first anniversary of trials of several Soviet activists who tried to monitor Soviet compliance with the Helsinki pact.

The Soviet Union, Canada, the United States and 32 other countries signed the agreement on European security and co-operation in the Finnish capital Aug. 1, 1975. In it, the signatories pledged to ensure basic human rights for their citizens.

Amnesty said it "knew of 321 individuals in the Soviet Union who had been sentenced to terms of imprisonment, exile or similar deprivation of liberty, or who had been forcibly confined to psychiatric hospitals, for the non-violent exercise of their human rights since August, 1975."

The organization, which lobbies for the release of political prisoners around the world, said other Soviet citizens arrested during the same period await trial.

"Among the hundreds of prisoners of conscience are 11 Helsinki monitors," Amnesty International said. "Most of the monitors are serving sentences of 12 or more years' imprisonment and exile. Others are serving sentences of internal exile."

It said the monitors are being held "in penal institutions characterized by medical neglect, chronic undernourishment and excessively-heavy labor in unsanitary and sometimes physically dangerous conditions."

Amnesty said monitors Levko Lukyanenko, Viktoras Petkus and Oleksa Tikhy are serving parts of their sentences in "special regime" corrective labor camps. It called the camps "among the most severe types of penal institutions in the country."

The organization also said Petkus is sharing a cell in Chistopol Prison with dissident Anatoly Shcharansky.

Shcharansky was sentenced July 14, 1978, to three years in prison and another 10 years in a strict-regime labor camp on charges of treason and espionage.

No new SALT talks, Gromyko warns U.S.

MOSCOW (AP) — Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko said today "it would be impossible to reopen negotiations" if the U.S. Senate refuses to ratify the just-signed SALT II arms limitation treaty. But he also said the pact can be verified, that the Soviet Union will abide by it and urged doubting U.S. senators to support it.

At a news conference, Gromyko switched to English from Russian to underscore his point for Americans. It was the first flat statement by the Soviets that they would not return to the bargaining table if the treaty is not ratified.

"I tell you frankly it is impossible to resume negotiations," he said, his voice rising. "It would be end of negotiations — end.

"No matter what amendments would be made, it would be impossible to reopen negotiations. Fantastic situation."

Addressing one issue that especially troubles the U.S. Senate as it prepares to debate the treaty, Gromyko said the pact is adequately verifiable, and that in any case the Soviet Union will not violate its terms.

"It is not our habit to violate international treaties and agreements," he said, again speaking in Russian.

"The sides have agreed in principle that the verification must be carried out by national means. Each side has enough of these, and the American side knows this well."

Gromyko urged senators who are opposed to the treaty or who are undecided to "be guided by their consciences and political judgment."

OPEC unites on levy hike

GENEVA (AP) — Members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) are gathering in this Swiss city for a pricing meeting that is expected to increase their base price of crude oil to at least $18 a barrel.

That would be $1 more than the current average price of OPEC crude.

The oil ministers of the 13 members of the oil cartel meet Tuesday and Wednesday to try to unify their price structure after three months of proliferating surcharges due to the oil shortage.

OPEC's base price since March has been $14.55 for a 42-gallon barrel, but the demand due to the reduction in Iranian production enabled individual members to tack on surcharges running as high as $6 a barrel.

The rush by all the OPEC nations except Saudi Arabia to profit from individual surcharges caused fears among some members that the cartel was losing the unity that enabled it to control world oil prices. As a result, most members seem determined to leave Geneva with a unified price.

"The pricing system should be the same for all the countries," said Oil Minister Humberto Calderon-Berti of Venezuela. "We have to find a point where all of us can come together."

Both Calderon and Kuwait's oil minister, Ali Khalifa Al-Sabah, said they expect the group will have little trouble reaching a consensus.

"I don't think it will be a difficult meeting," said Khalifa.

Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani of Saudi Arabia hinted a base price of $18 a barrel would be acceptable to his government. Since Saudi Arabia is OPEC's biggest producer, most analysts expect agreement on a price at or near that level.

There have been rumors that Iran and some of the other more militant members might hold out for a much higher price, but the Saudis' ability to hold the price down by increasing production was expected to keep the others in line.

Saudi Arabia is currently producing 8.5 million barrels of oil a day, about 30 per cent of OPEC's total, and 15 per cent of the world's production. The head of the Saudi state oil company, Abdul Hadi Taher, said on Sunday that his government might increase production one million barrels a day to ease the impact of the price increase on the industrialized West. But the Saudis could increase production by 3.5 million barrels if they wanted to.

The dirty robbers

LECCO, Italy (AP) — Bandits using skin-diving equipment made their way through a sewer into the underground safe-deposit box room of a bank in this north Italian town and fled with cash and jewels worth millions of dollars, police said today.

Police said the bandits used the sewage system to reach the thick safe room wall which they perforated with pneumatic drills. Then the bandits emptied all the safe-deposit boxes and made off with their contents.

There was no official estimate of the amount taken, but police put the haul in the millions of dollars.

Gas-line violence

Times News Services

It was the driest weekend ever for drivers in the eastern U.S. with the lines long and the mood mean.

Frustrated motorists joined striking truckers to fight police in Levittown, Pa. while Suffolk County, N.Y., police answered more than 100 trouble calls at the gas pumps and Minnesota stations reported that they may rapidly sell off June allocations and close for the rest of the month.

Throughout the New York City metropolitan area the gas dried up. In the city, lines at service stations were still long today with morning rush hour traffic lighter as commuters used mass transit or car pools.

Fires and vandalism marked the protests by about 3,000 persons Sunday evening in the Philadelphia suburb of Levittown. The crowd was dispersed by 300 officers dressed in riot gear with dogs and billy clubs.

More than 100 demonstrators and 12 police officers were injured, none seriously, said Bristol Township police officer Raymond Grimes.

The violence came less than 24 hours after a disturbance involving trucks and disgruntled motorists that resulted in 69 arrests Saturday night.

Bystanders said that firemen trying to extinguish fires in an abandoned car and a van were pelted with beer cans and rocks. Two service stations were vandalized.

Somoza rejects ouster demand

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (WP) — President Anastasio Somoza has categorically rejected a resolution of the Organization of American States calling for his resignation, and ordered his National Guard commanders to find new recruits, maintain unity and continue fighting.

Late Saturday night, on a monitored police band radio hookup with commanding officers battling Sandinista guerrillas throughout the country, Somoza said the OAS resolution "encourages us to continue struggling."

Mass withdrawal of international support for his government "means nothing more than that we will have to fight with only our own resources," Somoza told the commanders.

"It doesn't matter to me what some countries say who don't know the reality of Nicaragua," he said.

A 17-nation OAS majority voted Saturday for the "immediate and definite replacement of the Somoza regime," and the installation of an opposition government.

In a separate 10-minute televised speech to the nation Sunday afternoon, Somoza did not even mention the subject of resignation. The OAS resolution, he said, "is a clear intent to violate the sovereignty of the Nicaraguan people" but is "not obligatory for member countries."

"It only urges members bilaterally to look for peaceful solutions to the Nicaraguan problem," Somoza said. "As a man open to dialogue... I want to say to all Nicaraguans and to the rest

Atkey drafts job program: Grits scoff

OTTAWA (CP) — Employment Minister Ron Atkey says he hopes to announce a new job-creation policy this week that will entice the private sector to make work for thousands of unemployed Canadians, especially youth.

However, while Atkey is preparing bold statements about "new directions in job creation," officials are doubting the Progressive Conservative government's ability to deliver job creation promises made during the election campaign.

Officials suggest that the new policy will virtually be the former Liberal government's policy with some tinkering, such as renaming existing programs. They say there is no money for dramatic changes.

And some MPs say privately that Atkey wouldn't dare abolish direct job creation programs such as Canada Works — as promised by Prime Minister Clark during the campaign — because some politicians count on the grants to stay in the good graces of many constituents.

Canada Works grants are allocated on a constituency basis with MPs having a say in who gets how much money for what projects.

"That's a matter very much under review," Atkey said in an interview, suggesting that a decision on abolishing the $194 million Canada Works and related multi-million dollar grant programs may be postponed.

Officials say that another program Clark promised to abolish, called FLIP (Fed-

Arabs applaud embassy study

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Clark's move to defuse the explosive Jerusalem issue over the weekend has apparently reassured Arab representatives here.

But Israeli Ambassador Mordechai Shalev said after meeting Clark he wanted to discuss details of the prime minister's plan with his own government before reacting. However, he applauded Clark for standing by his decision to move the Canadian embassy in Israel to Jerusalem from Tel Aviv — though the move now seems a long way off.

Egyptian Ambassador Hassan Fahmy said Sunday he was "greatly relieved" when Clark told him Saturday he was appointing former Conservative leader Robert Stanfield to carry out a thorough fact-finding study in the Middle East.

Fahmy also noted with approval Clark's statement that the Jerusalem move must be "compatible with the efforts that are being made to achieve a comprehensive peace settlement in the Middle East."

"That's a very important point actually," the ambassador said. The Arabs have repeatedly said shifting the embassy to Jerusalem would undermine peace efforts.

Clark indicated the Stanfield mission will not be completed until next year. If Canada waits to move the embassy until Middle East peace is achieved, the transfer to Jerusalem may be years away.

Police drive truck into bikers' club

TORONTO (UPC) — Toronto police used a truck to smash through the door of a motorcycle clubhouse Saturday, charging a man in the shooting of a woman at another club's headquarters earlier.

Police said members of the Para-Dice Riders and Iron Hawgs motorcycle clubs had fought each other in a tavern brawl Friday night, leading to an incident at the Iron Hawgs clubhouse in which a woman was shot in the buttocks and stomach with a shotgun.

Police said Para-Dice members, armed with shotguns and rifles, forced members of the Iron Hawgs to kneel on the floor and strip the club crests off their jackets — a sign of submission.

One Iron Hawg member refused and was hit across the head with a shotgun butt, police said. The gun went off, hitting the woman.

City and provincial police, armed with a search warrant, were later refused entry to the Para-Dice Riders headquarters and used the armored truck to smash through the steel-reinforced door.

Security tight as Joe hits Tokyo

By JIM ROBB
FP News Service

TOKYO — Prime Minister Joe Clark walked down the gangway of his armed forces Boeing 707 today to be greeted by Japanese Foreign Minister Sunao Sonoda as he arrived for the economic summit of seven nations which opens Thursday.

Clark's flight into Tokyo's Haneda Airport was uneventful, in contrast to the attempted terrorist interference with President Jimmy Carter's aircraft on its approach Saturday.

But although the landing was quiet the strict security the Japanese have mounted for this economic summit was visible even before the Canadian aircraft touched down.

Security policemen were spaced at short intervals along the length of the runway, and in nearby waterways police boats circled slowly with their armed crews.

The roads to the New Otani hotel, being used by the Canadian delegation, was lined with policemen as buses carrying journalists sped by. There were heavy police details at key intersections and in buildings on the route.

Traffic is being turned back from the conference area surrounding the Akasaka Palace in downtown Tokyo while the summit is being held and Japanese television is broadcasting notices to drivers to check with police on what streets to use.

The prime minister had time for only a few brief comments to reporters, cordoned off behind carricades from the official party, before he was whisked away by helicopter to Akasaka Palace to view the conference site, before going on to his hotel.

Clark told reporters it was a significant year in Canadian-Japanese relations because it was 50 years ago that Canada established diplomatic relations with Japan.

He also reminded journalists this is his second visit here this year. He met Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira for the first time in January. Japan was the first stop on Clark's eastern tour when he was opposition leader.

Logistics screw-ups caused by inexperienced staff hampered most of that earlier tour but everything went smoothly today as the professionals in the armed forces and external affairs took over.

'Name of the game is to have a job down the road'

Times Staff

About 80 per cent of the graduates of Camosun College's trades training program last year have found employment.

"The name of the game is to have a job down the road," says program director John Drysdale.

He said in an interview at the Interurban Road campus that at times it is difficult to balance the demand for training against the jobs that are available.

"We don't grind them out in such numbers that we flood the market," Drysdale says, but on the other hand he feels there should always be a surplus of available workers in any occupation.

It is encouraging to hear him say during a tour of the facilities that all those taking the business machine repair course, for example, will find jobs. Or that of 38 who started the cook training course, which is almost finished, only three are left.

The rest found jobs and left the course.

He points to an indication that the building industry is not totally dead, and that nearly half of those taking the architecural drafting course have already been placed.

"Things are looking good," says Drysdale. "There is too much bloody pessimism out there."

The trades program incorporates three basic kinds of courses — pre-apprenticeship, pre-employment and upgrading.

In the first category are carpentry, plumbing-steamfitting, auto body repair, auto mechanics and business machine repair.

The pre-employment courses include electronics, cook training, welding, architectural drafting, map drafting, diesel mechanics, small engine repair and power engineering.

The upgrading variety could be in almost any category where there is an expressed need for improving their skills.

The pre-apprentice programs deal with those so-called "designated trades" which teach newcomers their skills through three or four-year apprenticeships.

During that time, the apprentice works on job sites alongside journeymen and returns to the trades school for a month, six weeks or perhaps two months each year, depending on the trade, for specific courses and training.

The pre-apprenticeship courses are generally between five to six months long and geared to providing the potential journeyman with some of the basic skills of his trade.

One of the problems during the current depressed state of the construction industry is that those taking the pre-apprenticeship program and even those working as apprentices are having a hard time either getting started with a company or finding enough work to complete their training.

The pre-employment programs are for those interested in non-designated trades.

These courses are generally 10 months and in most cases provide sufficient training that an individual can move right into a job.

Drysdale, who has been associated with the trades school for the past 21 years, says Camosun's is the third largest in the province behind the Vancouver Vocational Institute and the Pacific Vocational Institute in Burnaby.

Yearly enrolment has varied from 400 to 725 and the courses are open to anyone 16 years old and up who has completed high school.

There is one stipulation: a young person must have been out of regular school for at least a year. Drysdale says this gives them time to get a better idea what they want to do.

He says the standards at the college are going up as there are more and more young people who have completed high school.

Earlier this year, the provincial government appointed a task force to study the whole area of trades training.

Right now the pre-apprenticeship and pre-employment course "produce a confusing mix of training programs," the ministries of labor and education said in launching the task force.

The force's first report was due June 18 but has not been released and a second report is due by the end of July.

Camosun College principal Lloyd Morin pictures trades schools at the hub of a wheel.

At the end of the spokes are the employers, unions and students wanting training.

"Somehow we have to keep the wheel turning," he says, adding that it takes a co-operative effort in order to ensure not only that jobs are available for graduating students but that training is given for skilled jobs in currently unforeseen areas.

Morin says many employers simply judge their employee needs by existing job vacancies.

"Educational institutions have the responsibility of looking down the road to anticipate what the needs are going to be."

Often employees have to be shown that their business would improve if they had a skilled person in a specific area, Morin said.

He pooh-poohs those who recommend the most efficient way for trades schools to operate is to do manpower surveys and then train only a certain number of people to fill forecasted positions.

There has never been a manpower analysis done that had any credibility, he says.

Camosun is often faced with the dilemma of being approached by people who feel they have a right to be trained as skilled tradesmen even though there may be no jobs available.

Their argument is that they have the same right to learn a trade as they have to go to university to learn history or archeology, Morin said.

"They ask, 'Why don't I have the same right to the trough? If there are no jobs, that's my problem.' "

Aftermath of Claremont grad party: 'Noisy but not destructive'

Meeting tonight to air action on grad party

The North and South Saanich Agricultural Society meets tonight to decide what action can be taken to recover the cost of damages which resulted from a graduation dance Friday night.

The dance, which left the fairground hall a shambles Saturday morning, has generated a storm of protest among society members.

Maurice Atkins, a director of the society, said today a special meeting will be held tonight to decide what action can be taken. The dance was organized by graduating students from Claremont high school.

Atkins said he was aghast at the mess left by the students and Russ Simpson, a former society member who went to the hall the next morning called it "a case of organized vandalism."

"It was disgusting. What the hell are we educating, what are we turning out who would do this kind of thing?"

Sandy Peden, one of six adult chaperones at the party, and Central Saanich Police Chief Bob Miles, who said he spent five hours outside the hall checking youths for liquor and keeping down rowdyism, denied things were as bad as painted.

"It was noisy, very noisy," Miles said, "but it wasn't destructive."

Miles called the controversy a "tempest in a teapot."

Peden agreed the hall was extremely messy after the dance, which was attended by about 250 youths, broke up at 2:30 a.m. but claimed the only damage done was to two windows in the front which were broken, and to one "rickety old table" which was overturned and had its legs torn off.

Peden said about a dozen youths who weren't students of Claremont gate-crashed the dance and blamed some of the trouble on them.

Peden said he arrived at the dance at 11:30 p.m. and noted police outside were confiscating liquor at the door.

He said he made no effort to seize the liquor because many of the youths were over 19 and it would have been impossible to clear the hall even though many of the students attending were underage. The student group did not have a liquor licence.

Simpson said the parquet dance floor, only installed a year ago, was littered with broken beer and whiskey bottles.

Miles said officers seized between 10 to 15 cases of beer and a number of bottles.

Peden noted the students had paid for cleaners to come in the next morning to clean up the mess. But the cleaners were initially prevented from doing the job when society members showed up and told them to hold off until the press could take pictures.

Prisoned in Ozette clay, a treasure

LAST WEEK I TOLD YOU how we came to Ozette, the archeologist's treasure-house on the ocean side of Washington state's Olympic Peninsula. Today we'll continue this ramble into the Indian past of many centuries ago, with a look at a delicate matter to start.

Presumably the multi-family occupants of the big cedar-plank houses buried by a sliding hill of blue clay were trapped within their abodes. But there's a severe lack of mention of human relicts among the 54,000 artifacts so far exhumed at Ozette.

The friendly young scientists whom we found setting up for another season at the dig warned us that the matter of human remains was not open to discussion. The Makah Indian band whose village this was controls all aspects of the operation. One of the terms laid down was that there should be no publicizing of certain aspects of the work.

So, projecting, we can conclude that the long-buried ancestors of the Makah clan have been turned up along with their superbly-crafted possessions, and dealt with respectfully by their descendants.

We do know that the big slide — the last and greatest of successive land slippages — dropped so suddenly on the village that it became a wilderness Pompeii. Pathetic sidelight: the body of a mother dog, found with her pups snuggled up and nursing.

Peg-legging in over the 3½ miles of cedar boardwalk, I had built up a grandiose picture of an Indian Atlantis. But Ozette, finally arrived at, was at first sight disappointing.

There was the antic huddle of cedar-shake hutches built by the scientists to house themselves and their gear. Beyond, crooked in the elbow of a steep green hillside, were squares, rectangles and patches of dried mud. Everywhere writhed the fat polyethylene pipes through which sea-water is pumped to wash the artifacts free of the prisoning clay.

It is only when one realizes how far below slide-level the dig has been cut . . . sees the blackened sections of housewall soaking in their preservative glycol-solution vats . . . and views the specimen display of objects uncovered . . . that one realizes the extent of the find.

One of the scientists, an amiable young curly-head dressed haphazardly in rubber boots, stained khaki shirt and bib-front American gob dungarees, led us out to the dig. We teetered after him with finicky care; the whole site was precisely laid out with color-coded pegs and plank containing-walls. Our guide settled his back against a sunshiny rise of clay, and, squatting on his heels proceeded to expound.

The wonder of Ozette is that it tells the story, as does no other archeological find, of a complete community, prosperous, productive, long-settled and organized, which conducted its affairs totally unshadowed by white influence.

True, scraps of iron have been found, and a piece or two of bamboo which could only have drifted across the Pacific as flotsam from an Oriental junk. But no ships called on this wild coast in the years before that 15th- or 16th-century clay slide. It is assumed that the iron may have been traded from band to band up the coast from Spaniard-dominated Mexico.

Evidence that the people of Ozette were vigorous and successful whalers lies everywhere about. Ribs and massive vertebrae are heaped along the walks. Our guide explained to us that the houses actually had drainage systems of arched whale ribs laid beneath them.

While we listened to the account of a vanished people, gulls planed and drifted on the gentle sea breeze. An occasional fountain of surf rose from the jagged reefs that guard the off-shore.

All was as it had been on Ozette's last day in a June now many centuries distant.

There would have been whaling and sealing canoes on the beach then, of course, loaded with harpoons and sealskin floats and great coils of twisted cedar-bark rope.

There would have been a busy coming and going of people. Well-fed people. Well clad in the woven, soft-pounded inner bark of cedar, sleeping warm at night under blankets of mixed bark and wool from the little white dogs kept by the band's slaves on neighboring Ozette Island. They even had cushions, those Ozette people, of cedar bark stuffed with cat-tail fluff.

Their presence lingered everywhere about.

We hiked back to our cars over the wonderful wooden trail. Next day, at the Neah Bay museum raised by the Makahs, we viewed the recovered wealth of Ozette, and absorbed a rather startling lesson.

It didn't all start with the white man. Before ever he poked his nose into the Pacific Northwest, an ordered, vigorous culture existed on this coast. As proof thereof, we have only to consider Ozette.

Hospital land flurry worries Couvelier

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier said today he wants to "ring the bell" to prevent land speculation in Saanich near the site of the Helmcken Road hospital.

Couvelier said the construction start on the new hospital has already prompted a flurry of development applications on the other side of the View Royal-Saanich boundary, and he can see signs of similar pressures building up for development of nearby land in western rural Saanich.

He said the argument being heard in many quarters is that it is inevitable such land will have to be freed for development of medical-dental buildings and similar ancillary uses.

"Is it inevitable? If it isn't, how do we ring the bell so that everyone understands that corner of Saanich stays the way it is?"

The mayor raised the questions this morning at a meeting of Saanich council's policy and management committee.

Ald. John Mika suggested council ask the Capital Region Board to endorse a policy that no applications be considered to remove Agricultural Land Reserve designation from lands near the hospital.

"It (the hospital) was put in the centre of an ALR area," Mika noted. "If you insist on the ALR being maintained you isolate the problem and prevent it being spread."

But the mayor expressed doubt that such action by Saanich would be enough to kill the development threat that exists.

Municipal planner Gil Laurenson said despite rumors of certain individuals assembling land on the Saanich side of the boundary, there is no way that land could be serviced and developed if Saanich maintains its urban containment policy.

Municipal engineer Clifford Warren said the land near the hospital is "one of the worst areas we could ever consider providing services to," as far as cost is concerned.

Cannery charged

A sports fishing cannery has been charged with selling sports-caught salmon.

Federal fisheries officials allege that sports-caught salmon was being sold by the Brentwood Sports Fishing Cannery Ltd., 7054 Brentwood Road.

Under the federal Fisheries Act it is illegal to sell, trade or barter any salmon caught by sports methods.

Fisheries officer John Stephen said charges stem from an investigation that began about two weeks ago.

'Name of the game is to have a job down the road'

80% of the trades training course grads at Camosun College found work last year

About 80 per cent of the graduates of Camosun College's trades training program last year have found employment.

"The name of the game is to have a job down the road," says program director John Drysdale.

He said in an interview at the Interurban Road campus that at times it is difficult to balance the demand for training against the jobs that are available.

"We don't grind them out in such numbers that we flood the market," Drysdale says, but on the other hand he feels there should always be a surplus of available workers in any occupation.

It is encouraging to hear him say during a tour of the facilities that all those taking the business machine repair course, for example, will find jobs. Or that of 38 who started the cook training course, which is almost finished, only three are left.

The rest found jobs and left the course.

He points to an indication that the building industry is not totally dead, and that nearly half of those taking the architecural drafting course have already been placed.

"Things are looking good," says Drysdale. "There is too much bloody pessimism out there."

The trades program incorporates three basic kinds of courses — pre-apprenticeship, pre-employment and upgrading.

In the first category are carpentry, plumbing-steamfitting, auto body repair, auto mechanics and business machine repair.

The pre-employment courses include electronics, cook training, welding, architectural drafting, map drafting, diesel mechanics, small engine repair and power engineering.

The upgrading variety could be in almost any category where there is an expressed need for improving their skills.

The pre-apprentice programs deal with those so-called "designated trades" which teach newcomers their skills through three or four-year apprenticeships.

During that time, the apprentice works on job sites alongside journeymen and returns to the trades school for a month, six weeks or perhaps two months each year, depending on the trade, for specific courses and training.

The pre-apprenticeship courses are generally between five to six months long and geared to providing the potential journeyman with some of the basic skills of his trade.

One of the problems during the current depressed state of the construction industry is that those taking the pre-apprenticeship program and even those working as apprentices are having a hard time either getting started with a company or finding enough work to complete their training.

The pre-employment programs are for those interested in non-designated trades.

These courses are generally 10 months and in most cases provide sufficient training that an individual can move right into a job.

Drysdale, who has been associated with the trades school for the past 21 years, says Camosun's is the third largest in the province behind the Vancouver Vocational Institute and the Pacific Vocational Institute in Burnaby.

Yearly enrolment has varied from 400 to 725 and the courses are open to anyone 16 years old and up who has completed high school.

There is one stipulation: a young person must have been out of regular school for at least a year. Drysdale says this gives them time to get a better idea what they want to do.

He says the standards at the college are going up as there are more and more young people who have completed high school.

Earlier this year, the provincial government appointed a task force to study the whole area of trades training.

Right now the pre-apprenticeship and pre-employment course "produce a confusing mix of training programs," the ministries of labor and education said in launching the task force.

The force's first report was due June 18 but has not been released and a second report is due by the end of July.

Camosun College principal Lloyd Morin pictures trades schools at the hub of a wheel.

At the end of the spokes are the employers, unions and students wanting training.

"Somehow we have to keep the wheel turning," he says, adding that it takes a co-operative effort in order to ensure not only that jobs are available for graduating students but that training is given for skilled jobs in currently unforeseen areas.

Morin says many employers simply judge their employee needs by existing job vacancies.

"Educational institutions have the responsibility of looking down the road to anticipate what the needs are going to be."

Often employees have to be shown that their business would improve if they had a skilled person in a specific area, Morin said.

He pooh-poohs those who recommend the most efficient way for trades schools to operate is to do manpower surveys and then train only a certain number of people to fill forecasted positions.

There has never been a manpower analysis done that had any credibility, he says.

Camosun is often faced with the dilemma of being approached by people who feel they have a right to be trained as skilled tradesmen even though there may be no jobs available.

Their argument is that they have the same right to learn a trade as they have to go to university to learn history or archeology, Morin said.

"They ask, 'Why don't I have the same right to the trough? If there are no jobs, that's my problem.' "

Aftermath of Claremont grad party: 'Noisy but not destructive'

Meeting tonight to air action on grad party

The North and South Saanich Agricultural Society meets tonight to decide what action can be taken to recover the cost of damages which resulted from a graduation dance Friday night.

The dance, which left the fairground hall a shambles Saturday morning, has generated a storm of protest among society members.

Maurice Atkins, a director of the society, said today a special meeting will be held tonight to decide what action can be taken. The dance was organized by graduating students from Claremont high school.

Atkins said he was aghast at the mess left by the students and Russ Simpson, a former society member who went to the hall the next morning called it "a case of organized vandalism."

"It was disgusting. What the hell are we educating, what are we turning out who would do this kind of thing?"

Sandy Peden, one of six adult chaperones at the party, and Central Saanich Police Chief Bob Miles, who said he spent five hours outside the hall checking youths for liquor and keeping down rowdyism, denied things were as bad as painted.

"It was noisy, very noisy," Miles said, "but it wasn't destructive."

Miles called the controversy a "tempest in a teapot."

Peden agreed the hall was extremely messy after the dance, which was attended by about 250 youths, broke up at 2:30 a.m. but claimed the only damage done was to two windows in the front which were broken, and to one "rickety old table" which was overturned and had its legs torn off.

Peden said about a dozen youths who weren't students of Claremont gate-crashed the dance and blamed some of the trouble on them.

Peden said he arrived at the dance at 11:30 p.m. and noted police outside were confiscating liquor at the door.

He said he made no effort to seize the liquor because many of the youths were over 19 and it would have been impossible to clear the hall even though many of the students attending were underage. The student group did not have a liquor licence.

Simpson said the parquet dance floor, only installed a year ago, was littered with broken beer and whiskey bottles.

Miles said officers seized between 10 to 15 cases of beer and a number of bottles.

Peden noted the students had paid for cleaners to come in the next morning to clean up the mess. But the cleaners were initially prevented from doing the job when society members showed up and told them to hold off until the press could take pictures.

Prisoned in Ozette clay, a treasure

LAST WEEK I TOLD YOU how we came to Ozette, the archeologist's treasure-house on the ocean side of Washington state's Olympic Peninsula. Today we'll continue this ramble into the Indian past of many centuries ago, with a look at a delicate matter to start.

Presumably the multi-family occupants of the big cedar-plank houses buried by a sliding hill of blue clay were trapped within their abodes. But there's a severe lack of mention of human relicts among the 54,000 artifacts so far exhumed at Ozette.

The friendly young scientists whom we found setting up for another season at the dig warned us that the matter of human remains was not open to discussion. The Makah Indian band whose village this was controls all aspects of the operation. One of the terms laid down was that there should be no publicizing of certain aspects of the work.

So, projecting, we can conclude that the long-buried ancestors of the Makah clan have been turned up along with their superbly-crafted possessions, and dealt with respectfully by their descendants.

We do know that the big slide — the last and greatest of successive land slippages — dropped so suddenly on the village that it became a wilderness Pompeii. Pathetic sidelight: the body of a mother dog, found with her pups snuggled up and nursing.

Peg-legging in over the 3½ miles of cedar boardwalk, I had built up a grandiose picture of an Indian Atlantis. But Ozette, finally arrived at, was at first sight disappointing.

There was the antic huddle of cedar-shake hutches built by the scientists to house themselves and their gear. Beyond, crooked in the elbow of a steep green hillside, were squares, rectangles and patches of dried mud. Everywhere writhed the fat polyethylene pipes through which sea-water is pumped to wash the artifacts free of the prisoning clay.

It is only when one realizes how far below slide-level the dig has been cut . . . sees the blackened sections of housewall soaking in their preservative glycol-solution vats . . . and views the specimen display of objects uncovered . . . that one realizes the extent of the find.

One of the scientists, an amiable young curly-head dressed haphazardly in rubber boots, stained khaki shirt and bib-front American gob dungarees, led us out to the dig. Today's Markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market fell moderately in active mid-afternoon trading.

A trading halt continued in shares of Simpsons Ltd. at the company's request. The stock last traded at $3.25. Simpsons has been holding preliminary discussions on a possible merger with Hudson's Bay Co.

Trading resumed at 12:30 p.m. in Hudson's Bay Co., which was halted along with Simpsons on Friday. The stock rose ⅛ to $28⅝ by 2 p.m.

Trading resumed at the opening in shares of Maplex Management and Holdings Ltd. following a halt Friday. Consolidated Graphics Ltd. of Toronto, a private company, plans to buy 53 per cent of Maplex Management. The stock was unchanged at $11 by 2 p.m.

Among industrials, Noranda Mines lost 1¾ to $49½, Gulf Canada 1⅜ to $61⅝, Canadian Occidental Petroleum 1 to $42, Home Oil B 1 to $66 and Union Oil of Canada ⅞ to $26½.

Atco A gained 1⅞ to $22¾, Asbestos Corp. 1 to $45, Woodward Stores A 1 to $24, Murphy Oil ⅞ to $24⅞ and MacMillan Bloedel ⅝ to $26¼.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined broadly today, awaiting oil-exporting countries' decision on a price increase.

Losers outnumbered gainers by a 2-to-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said traders seemed to be resigning themselves to the likelihood of a substantial increase.

Charter Co. dropped 5¼ to $29⅝ and Charter warrants lost 5⅜ to $25. A Venezuelan concern is seeking to outbid Charter for a 65 per cent interest in a Bahamian refinery, but Charter said today it is still convinced it will succeed in acquiring it.

Systron Donner rose 1⅛ to $14. The company agreed to a $15-a-share takeover by a British company's U.S. subsidiary.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market fell moderately near the close of trading today. The Financial Times index was down 1.7 to 474.3. Industrials declined while oils and banks advanced and golds were mixed. Canadian shares eased.

New steel lines slated by Stelco

TORONTO (CP) — Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. has announced a $365 million expansion program to meet a rising demand for new types of steel products.

The five-year expansion program is in addition to capital already committed to completion of the new steel mill at Nanticoke on Lake Erie.

A company statement said the latest expansion plans reflect the changing market where the emphasis is on steel of higher strength and greater tolerances.

Centrepiece of the new program will be the erection of a new hot steel mill at the Lake Erie development with an initial annual capacity of about 1.2 million tons, plus new processing facilities.

At the company's Hilton Works in Hamilton, a continuous sheet galvanizing line will be built with an annual capacity of 220,000 tons.

This is the company's fourth such installation and will be supported by the expansion and modification of the cold mill and ancillary facilities.

BASEBALL'S SOAP OPERA CONTINUES... ...WITH REGGIE JACKSON ON WAIVERS

What will morrow bring to Yankees?

NEW YORK (AP) — It has taken less than a week for New York Yankees to once again become a real-live soap opera, something approximating the so-called Bronx Zoo that existed from Reggie Jackson's arrival in 1977 to Billy Martin's departure last July.

Martin, cowboy boots and all, is back in the saddle, having replaced Bob Lemon — the man who replaced him. With the Yankees, it couldn't be any other way: already the World Series baseball champions are cloaked in controversy.

—Are the Yankees trying to trade Reggie?

—Has Reggie asked to be traded?

—Can Reggie and Billy ever coexist?

—Is George riding to the rescue?

—Will the morrow bring the final parting, peace at last or just one more in the never-ending series of events that would make the most turbulent soap opera seem dull by comparison?

Taking the questions in order, the answers are maybe, maybe, maybe, maybe and stay tuned.

Both Jackson and Yankee officials declined to comment Sunday on reports that the sidelined slugger has asked to be traded. And general manager Cedric Tallis said that "no players have been mentioned in any trades at this point."

Meanwhile, Martin continued to make it a point to praise Jackson, saying the Yankees "need Reggie's bat because Reggie's a great player."

But Jackson, obviously choosing his words carefully, seemed down in the dumps.

Asked if he would trade himself if he were general manager, Jackson said, "With all the unrest and discomfort, I would have to analyze what's best for the club. Does that get me off the hook?"

The Yankees did confirm that Jackson's name, along with six others, appeared on the American League waiver list last Tuesday. That was the day Martin returned from 11 months in exile to resume the managerial position he vacated almost a year ago after calling Jackson "a born liar" and owner George Steinbrenner "convicted" for illegal campaign contributions.

The Associated Press learned the other Yankees on whom waivers were asked were centre fielder Mickey Rivers, veteran pitchers Catfish Hunter and Jim Kaat, long-time outfielder Roy White, utility infielder Fred Stanley and rookie outfielder Darryl Jones.

However, both Tallis and club president Al Rosen said the waiver request was a "routine" baseball maneuver.

The waiver period on the seven Yankees expired at 2 p.m. EDT today and the club then has 48 hours to withdraw the name of any player who is claimed or send him to the claiming team for the $20,000 waiver price.

Martin said he was "not out to hurt Reggie Jackson in any way. I have no animosity toward the guy. I can hardly wait until he comes back so I can use his bat. I think Reggie likes me and I know I like him. There's not a person in the world I hate. There's no hate in my heart. There's no tension on my part."

Someone wanted to know if Jackson thought it odd that he was placed on waivers — no matter how routine — while Martin was saying again and again how important he is to the team.

"That's a good question," he said, answering the question without really answering it.

Asked if he wants out of New York, Jackson replied: "New York's been good to me. I've enjoyed it here. It's taught me a hell of a lot."

Although the June 15 trading deadline has passed, there are ways to work out a deal involving Jackson, if the club so desires.

Jackson was to remain behind this week while the Yankees go to Toronto before returning home on Friday. The club explained he would be better off taking private batting practice and doing his running in New York rather than risk further injury to his leg on Toronto's artificial surface.

Steinbrenner, who arrived at Yankee Stadium during the latter stages of Sunday's game with Cleveland, was unavailable for comment. But he was expected at his ballpark office today and it was a good bet that he and Jackson would get together for a heavy rap session.

Coetzee power crushes Spinks

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Gerrie Coetzee, a 24-year-old South African who prayed for help with his punches, has won a shot at a share of the world heavyweight title by flooring Leon Spinks three times in two minutes and three seconds of the first round.

Spinks, 25, a product of the St. Louis ghetto and former world and Olympic champion, answered the opening bell Sunday night with a furious barrage of punches and then wound up bouncing on the canvas, the victim of a vicious right-hand attack.

A series of overhand rights by the South African surprised and stunned Spinks as he was still trying to show he was unaffected and unfrightened by his opponent's hammer-like punches.

"I asked the Lord to help me in this fight, and I want to thank him," Coetzee said. "I must tell the people the Lord answered my prayers."

Spinks' defeat by a first-round technical knockout could mean a long period of inactivity and little money. But Coetzee's convincing win made him the fourth South African fighter to get a world championship fight and, possibly, the first ever to gain a heavyweight title.

Coetzee will fight John Tate of the United States in September for the World Boxing Association crown expected to be abandoned by Muhammad Ali. The fight will probably be in South Africa, according to promoter Bob Arum.

Tate, who came here to see who his next opponent would be, said he was unimpressed by the South African blitz.

However, he was one of the few not impressed by the awesome power of Coetzee, who got a big lift from reports that the championship fight could be staged in South Africa before a crowd of 100,000 and a purse certainly higher than the $105,000 he won in Monte Carlo.

After the fight, Spinks went to his corner and started crying. He locked himself in his dressing room and refused any interviews. Leaving the dressing room, he declined to answer any questions, saying only: "I got beaten. What else can I say."

Coetzee, little-known internationally because he fought all his previous bouts at home, remained a mystery because of his short performance here. He has 15 knockouts in 22 professional fights, all victories.

Coetzee also looked somewhat dispasssionate in the dressing room while 500 South Africans, who had chanted the national anthem before the fight, went crazy over his victory.

"I am now thinking of Tate," Coetzee said. "It would be another difficult engagement. I will train hard as usual and again will pray to the Lord to help me."

South African organizers will be praying themselves, hoping the Top Rank organization accepts their bid to stage the Coetzee-Tate title fight in Johannesburg.

Physiotherapist smoothed Trevino's march to victory

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Lee Trevino has two lingering thoughts about the Canadian Open golf championship — Glen Abbey and Frank Farrell.

"It's a super-tough course," the Super Mex from Dallas said Sunday after winning the second of his three Canadian Open titles at Glen Abbey, a torcherous 7,059-yard layout that played to par-71.

"Glen Abbey is like the other Jack Nicklaus course in Muirfield (Ohio)," said Trevino. "It is really difficult. There aren't too many birdie holes out there, but there sure are a lot of bogeys and double bogeys."

Trevino turned in a conservative score — par 71 — to nail down his second Canadian title since the championship was moved here in 1977.

That gave him a 72-hole score of 281, three under par and three shots in front of playing partner Ben Crenshaw, who also shot a 71 in the hunt for the $63,000 winner's purse and the Peter Jackson Trophy.

Tournament favorite Tom Watson, the leading money-winner on the tour this year and the leader here Friday and Saturday, game to grief with a triple bogey six on the third hole Sunday and never recovered.

Watson, vying to become the first golfer to win more than $400,000 in a single season, added six bogeys and only one birdie to finish at 78 — seven over par.

His $23,800 in prize money bumped his season's take to $387,624 and left him $12,000 shy of the target he would have reached with second-place money, $37,800.

Watson's blowup started the day with a three-shot lead over Trevino but gave them back on the third hole. He put his tee shot into the water, flubbed his shot from the drop area into deep rough on the side of the green and dropped back into a tie with Trevino.

He continued to flirt with the lead until he ran into a string of bogeys in the valley holes — Nos. 12 - 14 — and finished with bogeys on both 17 and 18.

Trevino's cheque jumped his season's winnings to $175,117 and moved him over the $2 million mark in career money to $2,024,563.

Trevino then mentioned Farrell: "a guy that rubs us down every morning."

Farrell, a London, Ont., physiotherapist, takes a week off his holidays each year to tend to the golfers.

Farrell worked on Trevino's bad back in 1977 and the 39-year-old golfer responded with his first tour win in three years.

"I didn't have him work on me last year and I lost," said Trevino, who finished in a third-place tie in 1978 behind winner Bruce Lietzke. "I used him again this year and won. I just might take him with me."

Jim Nelford, the 23-year-old tour sophomore from Burnaby, was the top Canadian, finishing with a 72 and a 288 score, good for eighth place and $10,850, which raised his season's winnings to $36,187.

Nelford, unaccustomed to the applause of a large gallery that followed him most of the day, said he didn't feel any added pressure.

"Now I know what Arnold Palmer feels like," said the two-time Canadian amateur champion, alluding to the 49-year-old veteran who is beseiged by crowds.

The only other Canadian to survive the cut, Gar Hamilton of Toronto, finished with a 77 and 295.

BRIEFLY: An anxious fan dove into the lake that borders the 18th green and swam across to greet Lee Trevino as the champion walked onto the green . . . He shook hands with the golfer before being escorted off by three policemen . . . Nelford's eighth-place finish was the best by a Canadian since George Knudson tied for sixth in the 1972 Open.

Mussels finally rebound but distress signals out

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Victoria Mussels finally won a baseball game Sunday but it may have come too late to save some of the hands on a ship that is listing badly.

Despite a 4-3 victory over Bellingham Mariners at Royal Athletic Park, owners Lynn and Jim Chapman aren't prepared to wait for the existing crew to bail out the Northwest League franchise. The distress flares have gone up in the direction of the Los Angeles Dodgers, San Diego Padres and Seattle Mariners.

The Chapmans aren't pressing the alarm button any too soon. Mussels, 2-4 on the young season, are third in the northern division standings behind a pitching staff that has yielded 46 runs in six games.

And there were only 146 paid customers in the park Sunday, which was to be expected in view of the fiasco the night before.

In that one, Victoria threw a 6-0 first-inning lead and a pair of early home runs by outfielder Pete Rabassa overboard and was scuttled 18-11 by Bellingham.

"We're phoning the Dodgers and the Padres," Jim Chapman said, "and Bellingham (a Seattle Mariner farm club with 33 hopefuls on the roster) may be willing to send us a couple of players.

"Van Schley (who is handling Mussels' payroll this year) is trying to get hold of a ballplayer in California. I'm not even sure of his name but Van says he's a proven player who has batted over .300 in a couple of leagues."

Mussels are also looking at righthander Randy Holt of Vancouver as a possible pitching addition.

"Van said that Grays Harbor (with whom he was connected last year) started like this," Chapman continued. "You can't panic early, but you've got to look at the number of fans in the seats. Now we're going to have to do something like win 10 in a row to get them back."

Mussel manager Bill Bryk, meanwhile, has slapped fines on several players for lackadaisical efforts in Friday night's 8-3 loss to Bellingham and Saturday's mess.

Sunday's contest was in complete contrast, thanks chiefly to steady pitching by starter Mario Avallone, who evened his record at 1-1 with relief help in the eighth and ninth from Roy Moretti.

Timely hitting by outfielder Jim Burton helped, too. Burton drove in three of Mussels' tallies with a two-run triple in the third and a sacrifice fly in the seventh.

Rabassa contributed a circus catch in left in the sixth and infielders Steve Young, Danny Purpura and Emil Drzayich turned two double plays, including a game-ender.

Nick Kintz, who singled to lead off the eighth, plated what turned out to be the winning run on a throwing error and passed ball.

Avallone lasted 7⅓ innings, yielding two runs on seven hits, walking two and striking out six. Moretti got the save, allowing a hit and a walk, both in the ninth.

Mussels continue with a three-game home stand starting tonight at 7:30 against Walla Walla Padres with lefthander Steve Hartery scheduled to pitch.

The series continues with games Tuesday at 1:30 p.m. in conjunction with a minor baseball clinic and Wednesday at 7:30.

Nanaimo drops in deeper hole

NANAIMO — Excellent goaltending and checking kept scores to single figures Saturday as Coquitlam Adanacs edged Nanaimo 9-6 to drop the Timbermen deeper in the Western Lacrosse Association cellar.

Victory enabled Adanacs to close to within one point of the leading New Westminster Salmonbellies.

Coquitlam's Greg Thomas made 44 saves while Mac Maude came up with 39 at the other end of the floor.

Adanacs led 2-1 after the first period and 6-4 after 40 minutes.

Brian Evans was the game's top scorer, counting four goals for the Timbermen. Mike Walsh and Ron Sage also scored for Nanaimo.

Dave Durante counted twice for Coquitlam while singles went to Mark Valastin, Matt Aiken, Dave Cochrane, Randy Delmonico, Wayne McAuley, Gord Quilty and Mark Tuura.

Next game: Tuesday — Victoria at Vancouver.

Salmonbellies down Burnaby

Rob Dalzell scored three goals to lead New Westminster Salmonbellies to a 15-12 victory over Burnaby Cablevision in a Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League game at Burnaby Sunday.

Ross Gatensbury, Brian Cowie and Dan MacIsaac each scored two goals for Westminster. Burnaby got three from Gary Purdon.

In a game played at Richmond on Saturday, the Roadrunners scored the only three goals in overtime to beat Coquitlam Adanacs 16-13.

Versatility ignored

Houston pitcher Joaquin Andujar is happy but would appreciate more recognition.

Andujar won his fourth game in five starts Sunday, scattering seven hits and benefitting from the clutch hitting of Alan Ashby and Denny Walling as the Astros downed San Diego Padres 4-1 in National League baseball action.

Andujar is happy any time he's pitching, whether it's in relief or as a starter. However, he feels his versatility has gone unnoticed by the media.

The emotional Dominican was so angry recently he took a shower with his uniform on to avoid talking to reporters.

"As long as the team wins, I don't care, he said. "But I am mad because nobody realizes the job I have done. I don't want publicity. I just want people to realize what I've been doing.

"I've done a good job in short relief, in long relief and as a starter. That's very hard to do."

Elsewhere Sunday, Philadelphia Phillies beat Montreal Expos 5-2, New York Mets defeated St. Louis Cardinals 6-2, Cincinnati Reds trimmed San Francisco Giants 8-7, Chicago Cubs blanked Pittsburgh Pirates 5-0 and Atlanta Braves defeated Los Angeles Dodgers 4-2.

The Phillies broke an eight-game National League losing streak against the Expos behind the hitting and pitching of Larry Christenson.

The Philadelphia righthander hit a pair of doubles and his ninth career home run while yielding two runs on eight hits over six innings. Tug McGraw finished up for the Phillies, gaining his fifth save.

Bill Marechek, Kevin Kennedy and Andy Reid combined to rack up 13 goals Sunday to power Victoria Athletics to a 21-13 victory over Saanich Metro Honda in a Vancouver Island Senior "B" Lacrosse League game at Pearkes Arena.

In another game, Esquimalt Universal Sheet Metal clipped G&W Landscaping 11-9.

Floyd Joseph and Rick Leggett each scored three times to lead Esquimalt's attack. Rod Hamilton and John Horrigan both scored three goals for G&W.

Kicker trips Esks

EDMONTON (CP) — Gerry Organ kicked a pair of 22-yard field goals in the final minute to overshadow a strong second-half effort by Edmonton Eskimo quarterback Warren Moon and give Ottawa Roughriders a 30-27 victory in a Canadian Football League exhibition Sunday.

The Eskimos trailed 21-1 at halftime but dominated the second half as Moon threw three touchdown passes and led the defending Grey Cup champions to 26 points and a 27-34 lead going into the last minute.

But as many of the 41,379 spectators began to file out of Commonwealth Stadium, Ottawa struck back. A 33-yard pass from Jimmy Jones to Cornell Barlow put Ottawa on the Edmonton 41-yard line and four plays later Organ tied the score.

Then a Moon pass deflected off a receiver's hands and Ottawa defensive back Doug Falconer intercepted it and ran 33 yards to the Eskimo 22. Seconds later, on the final play of the game, Organ kicked the winning points.
